A Letter From the Pacific Coast.

SANTA MONICA, CAL., OCT. 3, 1909.

EDITOR PRESS:—So many of my friends have asked me to write and give them an account of my trip and also to describe the place, that I thought best to do so through the PRESS, if you will kindly permit. When I bade good-bye to my friends at the Broad street station and started on my long talked of journey, it was hard to keep back the tears, but it would not do to cry, so I didn't. When the conductor looked at my ticket he shook his head and looked glum: "My sakes," he said, "that is an awful long trip to take in such hot weather." But I did not share his feeling of gloom and just looked forward to having a good time and a good time I certainly did have. Arrived a Corry at about 2:30 p. m., and found it was raining, I had to wait there till 4:30 p. m., aad then boarded the train on the Erie R. R., for Chicago. I enjoyed that part of my journey, at least as long as daylight lasted, but did not rest much during the night, as the car was crowded and I could not get into a position to sleep very much. But morning came at last and I found I was in Indiana. I enjoyed looking at the scenery—everything was beatiful. I was especially interested in the many beautiful groves here and there through the country. We arrived at Chicago about 9:00 a. m., and I left the train feeling very much "like a cat in a strange garret," not knowing where to go. But a pleasant looking lady stepped up to me and asked me if I was going out from that depot, or if I was going to tranfer depots. Then she said, "You look tired," (God bless her my looks didn't deceive me) "let me take some of your baggage." And she went with me to the bus I was to take, and saw me safely in. It is quite a long ways to the C. & N. W. depot, and the streets were so filled with different kinds of vehicles, going in every direction, that it almost seemed there would be a disaster of some kind, but we got through all right. We had to stop once for the bridge to turn around to let a steamer through, and I saw a bridge a short distance from there raised up in some way for the same purpose. I had to wait in Chicago till 10:45 p. m., and it certainly was rather tedious as I did not dare leave the depot and go very far ior fear I would not get back all right. But the time came at last, when I could go into the tourist sleeper, which was to be my home for about five days and nights. I found my berth, lower No. 11, made up (or made down, the porter said) and I was soon in it and it was not long till I was asleep.

We were in Iowa in the morning, and I was much interested in the level country, and large fields of corn. Some time in the afternoon we reached Council Bluffs, and our train shifted on the Union Pacific R. R. The next morning when we awoke we were in Nebraska and that is more beautiful than Iowa. Everybody had to set their watches back an hour here, and at another place further west, they had to set them back another hour. One man said we were going so fast time could not keep up with us. Well our train was faster than 'Old Dan," but was not as fast as the BuffaloFlyer, but fast enough for me. Sometime Sunday, we arrived in Wycoming and it was really cold and cloudy, and rained a little. At Cheyenne, Wy., I got out of the car and went into the depot. It is a beautiful place. The further west I went the more beautiful and strange everything appeared.

Our train passed through a tunnel somewhere along here, and it made me feel very solemn. They did not light up the car and I never imagined anything could be so dark. But I soon got used to them, for we passed through twenty-five or more before we got here and the longest of all was not very far from Los Angeles. At Ogden, Utah, we took the Southern Pacific R. R. We crossed Great Salt Lake, which is beautiful indeed. They told me the bridge is 30 miles long. That seems like a big story, but we were more than an hour crossing it. At either end it is made of stone and earth for a long distance, and the rest of the way it is made of wood. We crossed it at the extreme northern end, and about half-way across there is some land not covered with water and here is a station called Midlake. After crossing the lake, we crossed an old lake bed which was not pleasant, and was very hard on the eyes. It is covered with an alkali dust, fine as flour. Well everything we saw was interesting but not all were beautiful. Nevada is the most dreary country I ever saw.

A Old-Time Friend.

Capt. E. R. Mayo, of Smethport, transacted business here on Monday. "Bob," as many of his old friends used to call him when he was a hustling business man engaged in the manufacture of lumber and dealer in general merchandise, at Cameron, always taking a lively interest in everything calculated to advance the material interest of our county. Our mind goes back to those days, when "Bob" Mayo and Martin Cummings (father of Ex-County Treasurer John Cummings) accompanied by an enthusiastic crew of men walked up one cold November night to bring the glad tidings that Lumber township "gave 85 Republican majority and saved the day." Mayo and Cummings were a good team when they pulled together.

A Good Run.

The young men of the Athletic Association of the Emporium High School, who are tryingout for positions on the basket ball team, accompanied by Profs. W. G. Briner and R. H. Edgar, took some good healthful exercise in a cross country run to Howard Siding last Saturday morning. The entire distance of twelve miles was made in two hours and twenty minutes. Several of the young men suffered from stiff joints and sore muscles caused by the strenous exercise and were limping around last Sunday. The runs will be made each Saturday as long as the weather permits.

Quick Work.

Judge Hall, President Judge, assisted by Associates Hons. Geo. J. LaBar and John A. Wykoff, held a short session of court last Monday morning. Three prisoners were sentenced, viz: Sam Doll, larceny, 16 months in penitentiory; an Italian, larceny of $14.00, two years in penitentiary. Clifford Whitmire, f. b., sentenced to pay $1.50 per week for seven years and enter bail in the sum of $500. Sheriff Norris, assisted by Chas Clark and John Quigley, took the two first named to Allegheny city on Tuesday.

"Tempest and Sunshine."

The dramatization of Mary J. Holmes' popular novel, "Tempest and Sunshine" to be seen at Emporium Opera House on Tuesday evening, Oct. 19th, is the newest play by Lem B. Parker, written especially to the order of W. F. Mann for the successful young stars Ounia Marion and Gertrude Holland contains all the elements which go to make a successful play, and has received original treatment at the hands of its author.

Very Successful.

The supper furnished at the Reading Room by the ladies, Tuesday evening, for the benefit of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Trotter was very largely attended and netted about $72.00. It was an excellent meal and plenty of it. Mrs. Bennett Leutze, and the ladies who assisted her, desires us to thank all who favored them with their patronage. Few towns the size of Emporium respond more liberally to every laudable cause.

Happy Parents.

Joseph Burnsides and wife are happy over the arrival of a little daughter whose birth occurred last Sunday morning. Joe is one of Emporium's happiest men and is wearing a big smile that won't come off. Here's hoping that the little one may thrive and be a source of much comfort to her parents.

Debt Reducing Day.

Last Sunday being known as debt reducing day at the M. E. Church the offerings taken on that day, which amounted to $325.00 will be used to reduce the debt on the church. The Rev. Geo. M. Hoke, pastor of the First M. E. Church, at Shamokin, Pa., preached two excellent sermons, which were listened to by a large and appreciative congregations.

Roller Rink to Open.

On Wednesday, Oct. 20th, the roller skating rink will open for the season, and will run Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of that week and Friday and Saturday of the following week, and thereafter on Wednesday and Saturdays of each week.

Lost.

A rough gold stick pin, engraved with an image of a child. Finder will receive reward by returning same to C. L. Gilbert at the Warner House.

A story which reaches the heart and brings back memories of other days that we all like to remember. Such is the successful dramatization of Mary J. Holmes' popular novel, "Tempest and Sunshine," to be seen at Emporium Opera House on Tuesday evening, Oct. 19th.

Seriously Injured.

Ed. J. Rogers met with a serious and almost fatal accident last Friday evening. After completing some work in Emporium wanted to get home quick and in order to do so he got onto the yard engine that was going to make a fast run to the Emporium Powder Co., siding. As they passed the warehouse of the Keystone Powder Company, Jas. Farrell noticed Rogers attempting to get off and was thrown about twenty feet between the tracks and made signals to the R. R., crew to attract their attention. Rogers was found in an unconscious condition. He was taken to his home and medical aid summoned. Drs. DeLong and Smith labored with him for two or three hours, dressing his injuries. In addition to several severe cuts about head and face his left arm was fractured. A miracle that he was not killed. He is still in a serious condition yet he will pull through, for he is as tough as a pine knot. We will wager a shad that he walks home when he gets on his pins again. Ed. has had lots of ill luck during the past few years and it is time his luck turned.

State Sunday School Convention.

Special to the Press:—

It may be of interest to our people of Emporium to know that Harrisburg, the political centre of war in Penn'a, has been captured by an army of several thousand Sunday school workers. The little red-button with a white centre constitutes a passport to every home, office and lunch counter in the city.

Our Emporium party reached the city last evening, about fifteen hours ahead of the rush and consequently had a little time for sight seeing. Wednesday morning we "took in" the capitol building and found it to be second to none in the country. Perhaps there was considerable "graft" in connection with its erection, but just the same it is a building of which our state and its people should be exceedingly proud—"it's worth the money."

At two o'clock this afternoon we climbed the stairs of Chestnut St., Auditorium to attend the opening service of the Penn'a S. S. Convention. For some moments before reaching the building we could hear the sound of about 1500 voices ringing out that inspiring hymn, "The King's Business." Dr. Excell, who has charge of the singing, is a past master in the art of getting his audience to sing.

During the afternoon we listened to an inspiring address by Bishop Dubbs of the U. B. Church. At times the venerable Bishop was very eloquent in presenting his subject, "The place of the Sunday School in the Educational System of our Land." In a clear ringing voice, which could be heard in every corner of the room, Dr. Dubbs made the assertion that "The Sunday School is the greatest thing in America in the line of the spiritual development of the children. It solves the great American problem, a problem which ought not to exist, viz.: Where shall the child receive its religious education? The day school refuses to teach religion; the high school, the college and the university take the same stand. The home will not do it, the Sunday school is the only institution which will undertake this important work."

During the afternoon session the hearts of the Cameron County delegates thrilled with emotion as they discovered high above the platform a beautifnl banner with the name Cameron printed upon it. The banner signified that Cameron county stood in the front ranks as one of the best organized Sunday school counties in the State. Only 22 counties will receive these coveted banners.

It was a pleasure this noon to sit in the Zion Lutheran Church and watch delegates by the hundred pour out from the Penn'a R. R. station, cross to the church and register, and note how quietly it was all done. We take off our hats to the Harrisburg people for the kindly, courteous manner in which they are caring for this large company of Sunday School Workers.

The city expects to turn out en masse to-morrow night to witness the parade of about 5,000 members of the organized adult classes. We wish all our Cameron county friends could be down here to give three cheers and a tiger for their own county.

Yours truly,
"THE EMPORIUM DELEGATES."

Around the World.

Associate Judge, Hon. George J. LaBar and wife left last Tuesday evening for New York city, where they will join "Clark's Cruise Around the World," the Hamberg-American Steamer "Cleveland" 18,000 tons capacity, having been chartered for the entire trip. The steamer leaves New York on Saturday morning at six o'clock, and by the time this paper reaches the majority of our readers, the party consisting of over 600 Knights Templars, their wives and friends will be on the big pond on a four months' voyage, stopping at Maderia, Gibraltar, Naples, through the Suez Canal, three days in Cario, Suez, Bombay, Columbo, Calcutta, Burma, Singaphore, Java, Borneo, Manila, Hong Kong, Japan, Kobe, Yokohoma, Honolula, arriving at San-Francisco on Monday, Jan. 31, 1910 at six a. m., having made about 26,906 miles on water and railroads. The overland from San Francisco to Emporium will be at their pleasure whether to stop at points of interest.

Before leaving Emporium Judge La Bar and wife were given a genuine good cheer send off at Broad street station, a very large number of our citizens having assembled to wish them God speed on their long journey. Emporium Masonic Lodge, of which the Judge is an honored member, "called off" long enough to proceed to the depot in a body to wish them bon voyage.

Mr. J. P. Felt, of this place and Waldo W. Mattison of Ridgway, both spending some time in Florida, will meet the party at New York and make the cruise. Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Gleason, West Newton, Mass., are also registered to accompany the party. It is a grand trip and we regret we do not have the "rocks" to take it in.

Old Veteran Calls.

Mr. Alber Lord, of Cameron, came to Emporium last Friday to transact some business and celebrate his 77th birthday by calling on his old friends in town. The PRESS was one of the favored ones to enjoy a visit from the old veteran. We are always proud to welcome, at any time, those patriots,—some times called, in 1863, by the copperheads, "Lincoln's Hirelings"—who suffered privations that this, the grandest government on the face of the earth, should not perish. We always feel like downing our hat when we pass by one of those patriots.

Veteran Lord came to Cameron county in 1855 from Delaware connty, N. Y., and located at Sinnamahoning (then Clinton county). He enlisted at the outbreak of the rebellion in the 148th Penn'a Infantry, under Gen'l Jas A. Beaver. Mr. Lord was confined in southern prisons for seven months, and of course has suffered considerably from the effects of starvation and disease. Hope he may live to celebrate his 97th anniversary.

Instantly Killed.

Geo. C. Mox, of St. Marys, brother of Mrs. Chas. Vogt and Mrs. James Farrel, of this place, was instantly killed at Oil City last Thursday, while attending the State Firemen's Convention. While attempting to jump onto an automobile truck, loaded with firemen, he missed his footing, falling under the monster truck. His neck was broken, causing instant death.

Pleasant Affair.

The reception given last Friday evening at Emmanuel Parish House in honor of Dr. and Mrs. W. H. DeLong, who leave for Emporia, Fla., this week to reside for several months, was indeed a pleasing affair. The popularity of Dr. aud Mrs. DeLong was forcibly attested by the large attendance.

BOY ACCIDENTLY SHOOTS HIS CHUM

Victim Exonerates Boy Before Death. Funeral Friday Afternoon.

About two o'clock Tuesday afternoon two young men—Lewis Jessee Carman, aged about 17 years and Chas. Dolan, about 14 years, son of Merrick Nolan—got a gun from Walter Granger and prepared to go after wild ducks. When only a few rods from the farm of W. E. Angevine, on North Creek, where the former young man has been employed on Mr. Angevine's milk route, they stopped on the bank of the creek when young Nolan attempted to show his companion how the field piece worked—the shot gun being of a 12 gauge pattern—when the gun discharged the load entering the stomach of Carman, who was in close range. Dr. Bush was hurred to the farm house of Mr. Angevine and after examining the nature of the wound saw at once that it was fatal and so informing the poor boy's friends. A telegram was sent to the unfortunate lad's step-father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Evans, of Austin, who came over at once, arriving in the death chamber at 9:30, just as the unfortunate lad breathed his last.

The grief of young Nolan is said to have been very touching, especially when the dying boy fully exonerated him of all blame. All that Mr. Angevine's family, as well as neighbors, could do to ease his suffering while his young life slowly ebbed away, was cheerfully rendered.

His funeral will be held at Rich Valley church, Friday afternoon at two o'clock, interment to take place in the cemetery near the church.

The death of this young man is indeed sad. We knew him and admired his spirited zeal to rise in the world and only lately heard of his desire to enter the U. S. navy that he might aid in defending his country.

Great sympathy is expressed for the unfortunate companion, who is not morally responsible for the sad death. It was an act of Providence. The poor mother and other relatives are indeed to be consoled.

Mr. Thomas is still with his wife and will remain until she is out of danger. Their friends sincerely hope she may rapidly recover.

Scratching His Head.

Parker Jackson, the fog-horn porter at The Warner for many years, is now seen scratching his head and asking the ivories, "Shall I or not?" since his cousin "Shorty" beat his time. He is seen polishing up his rock pile and something will be doing soon, else all signs fail.

Analysis of Reason.

Reason is always a kind of brute force; those who appeal to the head rather than the heart, however pallid and polite, are necessarily men of violence. We speak of "touching" a man's heart, but we can do nothing to his head but hit it.—G. K. Chesterton.

POINTS OUT MERITS

PRESIDENT TAFT'S ARGUMENTS ON PAYNE BILL.

Chief Executive Clearly Shows That Pledges of the Republican Party Made to the People Have Been Kept.

President Taft has made his cagerly looked for tariff speech and has declared himself in terms which will please the great majority of the American people, who are neither free traders nor extreme protectionists. With characteristic frankness Mr. Taft admits the defects of the Payne bill. With judicial care he weighs its merits and its faults and decides that, judged as a whole, it is good. He makes no pretence that it is an easy task to revise a tariff, nor does he minimize the difficulties which confront the conscientious legislator who seeks to ascertain the cost of production at home and abroad. He makes clear his expectation that the new board will devote itself to the task.

Discussing the tariff bill as a whole, Mr. Taft shows that the Payne tariff bill makes three times as many decreases as increases; that decreases have been made on articles entering into consumption to the amount of $5,000,000,000, mostly necessaries, and increases on articles entering into consumption to the amount of $851,000,000, of which $579,000,000 are luxuries. Concretely stated, therefore, the Payne bill, measured in terms of consumption, made decreases on commodities to the amount of $5,000,000,000 and increases on the necessaries of life to the amount of $272,000,000 only. In the light of this showing it was certainly unnecessary for the president to make any profound apology for his course in signing the bill or any excuse for those who voted for it.

Taking up the method of reasoning which was used by the "insurgents" in congress, the comparison of imports under the various schedules of the old and the new law, Mr. Taft dismisses it as wholly misleading, saying, "Nothing could be more unjust in a protective tariff which also contains revenue provisions."

To the extreme "stand-patter" Mr. Taft's discussion of the tariff bill will doubtless prove almost as unsatisfactory as it will to the free trader. His declaration that the wool schedule ought to have been reduced, that "it is the one important defect in the present Payne tariff bill and in the performance of the promise of the platform to reduce rates to a difference in the cost of production with reasonable profit to the manufacturer," will afford as little solace to the injured feelings of the "range senators" as to the woolen manufacturers of the east. His intimation that the schedules will have to be still further revised when his new tariff board shall have acquired the information he will demand of it will disquiet the heart of the extreme "stand-patter." But to the great majority of the voters, including not only Republicans but a large number of latter-day Democrats, Mr. Taft's attitude will strongly commend itself.

Not least important was Mr. Taft's broad intimation that the next presidential campaign would be fought out on tariff lines, that three years hence the tariff board would have acquired the information necessary to the consideration of the tariff on a more scientific basis than ever before and that by that time the Republican party would be ready to go before the people with a definite proposition. Three years is a long period in politics, but there can be little doubt that if the question of revision of the tariff is then uppermost the people will regard the passage of the Payne bill and President Taft's frank discussion thereof as an earnest that the Republican party will make a sincere effort to fulfill the party pledge, whereas the debate and the votes on the Payne bill amply demonstrated that party pledges have no binding force with the members of the opposition.

TO DISFRANCHISE THE NEGRO

Maryland Democrats Have Old Idea with New and Specious Arguments.

Maryland Democrats have opened another campaign for the disfranchisement of the negro, which is being urged with novel and specious pleading. The proposed amendment to the constitution would bar negroes who have not been thrifty enough to accumulate $500 and an education. Of course there are the usual arguments about restricting the suffrage to the intelligent and responsible element, barring the illiterate and ignorant, and all that. The new wrinkle is the assertion that by adopting the amendment the grandfather clause can be brought at last squarely before the United States supreme court and a decisive ruling obtained on the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments. Accompanying this is the Rayner argument that these amendments are an iniquitous interference with the state's rights and furnish an alleged necessity for defending them.

All this, of course, makes campaign declamation, but it may be doubted whether it can obscure the real purpose of the Maryland politicians in pushing the issue. There are some 60,000 negro voters in the state. The Democrats believe that these represent the balance of power. By the elimination of the great majority of the negro voters the state, they think, can be made safely Democratic. That is all there is to it. The alleged anxiety to get the federal amendments before the supreme court by tdopting the state amendment and having a test made is simply campaign dust thrown in the eyes of the voters. If the Democracy is so anxious to obtain such a devision on this issue there have been numerous opportunities in the southern states that have been carefully overlooked.

Taft's South Carolina Appointments.

Mr. Taft's record in the way of appointments in South Carolina is one to which he may "point with pride," and for which he is entitled to the thanks of the people of this state. The roll is worth calling at times to show how far we have traveled since the unhappy blunders of the last administration: Durant, collector of the port of Charleston, with "Pete" Jennings as deputy collector thrown in for good count; Floyd as postmaster at Spartanburg, with the indorsement of many of the best men in that city; Hastie as assistant district attorney at Charleston; Storen as census supervisor of the First district; Waterhouse at Beaufort; Russell at Anderson; Pritchard at Greenville; Douglas for the Fifth district; Dupre for the Columbia district, and possibly Alexander for the Sixth district. All these men are white men; a number of them are Democrats, and the majority of them are natives of the state. We think that this is a good record, and that, besides pleasing the people and making them think that they really have an interest in the government at Washington, the government itself will get first rate service.—Charleston (S. C.) News and Courier (Dem.).

At the rate new quarrels are springing up in the Democratic party in states without which it can never hope to win again, it may easily be that the great advertiser of Lincoln will be the only man willing to accept a Democratic presidential nomination in 1912.

JILTED GIRL BLOWS OFF HEAD WITH GUN

VILLA OF AN AMERICAN PAINTER AT ROLLEBOISE, FRANCE, THE SCENE OF TRAGEDY.

GIRL NOTED FOR HER BEAUTY

She Served at Night in the Double Capacity of Domestic and Model —Was Thrown Down by Her Lover at a Public Ball.

Mantes-Sur-Seine, France.—The villa of Daniel Ridgway Knight, the American painter at Rollerboise, overlooking the Seine, was the scene of a dramatic tragedy October 6. Armande Pisoni, a 17-year-old-girl, renowned throughout the countryside for her beauty and who served at night in the double capacity of domestic and model, after being publicly jilted at a village ball by her lover, Gustave Fortune, returned to Mr. Knight's home, took the painter's shotgun and, placing the barrel under her chin, blew off her head. Mr. Knight found the body of the girl the following morning upon his return from Paris.

Before killing herself Armande wrote a pathetic letter to her father, a chimney sweep in Paris, and to her sisters, adjuring the latter to avoid love affairs and never to believe man's word. She also left a letter to Mr. Knight asking forgiveness for the trouble and annoyance she was causing him in committing such a deed in his home. The coroner returned a verdict of suicide during a temporary fit of madness. When Fortune heard of the tragic death of his sweetheart he tried to kill himself.

The funeral of the girl was the occasion of remarkable demonstration of affection for her. The entire populace of the village attended the services and followed the coffin to the grave. Mr. Knight paid all funeral expenses. He said that the girl had a face of the most remarkable beauty he had ever seen. She was posing for pictures Mr. Knight is painting which he said are valued by him at $50,000. One of them is for John H. Converse, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works at Philadelphia.

MEN MUST BE SOMEBODY

Progressive Women of New York Decide that It Is Not Incumbent on Wife to Use Husband's Name.

New York City.—The New York legislative league, composed of progressive women, has decided by resolution that it is not incumbent on a married woman to use her husband's name. While this resolution was unanimously carried many prominent speakers declared that at the present time, with men in a more powerful political position, it would be expedient for women to use some part of their husband's names.

"My husband objected to me using my own name," declared Mrs. Margaret Holmes Bates, "and it did not do him any good. I wrote and signed my writings with my own name. It is all very well in private and social life to use your husband's name if he is anybody. I don't see why anybody should use the name of a nonentity."

DUN & CO.'S TRADE BULLETIN

Every Large Business Center Throughout the Country Reports Progressive Improvement.

New York City.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says:

From every large business center throughout the country come reports of progressive improvement in trade. In most instances the reports are more than satisfactory; they speak of a present and prospective increase in activity that is indicative of a return to even more than normal conditions. In some cases the volume of trade is described as equal to, or in excess of previous records. In the iron and the steel trade full productive capacity appears to have been approached and the outlook for 1910 is very bright.

PICTURESQUE PAGEANTS ILLUSTRATING THE WORLD'S PROGRESS . . . FEATURES OF ST. LOUIS' CENTENNIAL.

By Emery Steele Huntingdon

THE MIGHTY activities and marvelous progress the world has seen in the past 100 years are strikingly illustrated in the centennial celebration of the incorporation of St. Louis. Picturesque pageants with everything in the way of the spectacular which is most likely to stir the imagination of the spectator into appreciating the work of the past through contrasts with the present feature the week's program.

The greater part of the history of early St. Louis is really more fit for the unwritten American epic poem than it is for mere prose. Its work as a frontier town in the first half of the nineteenth century made it the mid-continental city of the United States in the second half. Its pioneer trade routes are now the great routes of steam transportation between the Rio Grande and the Canadian border and between the Mississippi and the Pacific. It established the first water routes from the headwaters of the Ohio to the mouth of the Missouri and of the Illinois, opening the first water connection for steam transportation between the Ohio and the upper Mississippi and Missouri, developing the Ohio river states on both sides of that stream.

Every state now on the map west of the Mississippi was penetrated by its business pioneers, establishing the first centers of trade. The whole west is interested with St. Louis in celebrating this great event, because in founding the first great city of the trans-Mississippi west the pioneers made the western beginnings now explained in scores of other western cities and in actual thousands of other incorporated towns, which, if they are not already great, are not unduly modest in their expectations of becoming so. The invitation to a thousand mayors of American cities to participate in the festivities shows that St. Louis fully appreciates its position as the pioneer city of the great west.

As there were less than 200 houses, including outhouses and barns, in the St. Louis which incorporated in 1809, it could not have had much over 900 people. The town was already the chief seat of the western fur trade, with its trading stations pushed to the headwaters of the Arkansas and far towards the sources of the Missouri and the Yellowstone. Doing business wholly by barter, with almost no money in hand, in sight or in circulation, with resources represented almost wholly by the spirit of its 900 people; with the ax and rifle and blacksmith's sledge as its implements, with the one-horse cart, the keelboat and canoe as its transportation facilities, the little town, when it incorporated, already looked on its work as that of opening up the United States of the future to the Rocky mountains and beyond them to the Pacific In 1809 it had lost Meriweather Lewis, but it still had his companion explorer, William Clark, to stand for the spirit of the American and French "makers of destiny" who thought little more of starting a thousand miles into the unknown west from St. Louis than the average St. Louisan now thinks of starting for the Pacific coast in a sleeping car.

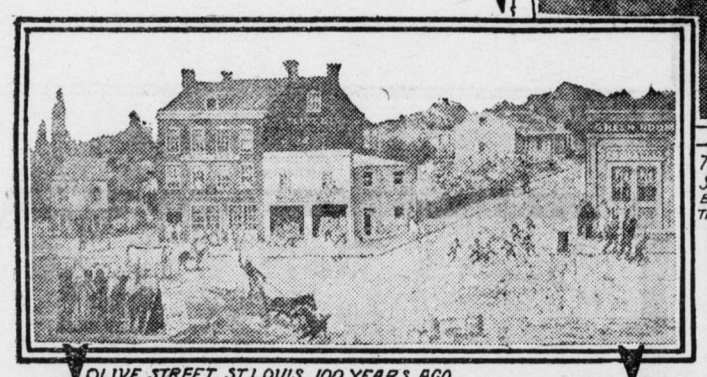
THE FOUNDING OF ST. LOUIS BY LACLEDE. BY SPECIAL PERMISSION FROM THE PAINTING BY F. L. STODDARD



OLIVE STREET, ST. LOUIS 100 YEARS AGO

OLIVE STREET TODAY

From a village of 900 inhabitants to the fourth city in the United States, with a population of three-quarters of a million, is a wonderful achievement, but it sinks into insignificance when compared with the giant strides of the past century in the world of science, commerce, the arts and every field of endeavor which makes for a higher and better civilization.

It is a severe strain on the imagination to attempt to bridge over the gap between the meaning of an airship crossing the Mississippi river at St. Louis this year and what the ancient keelboats of 1809 meant, as they landed at the foot of Walnut street, where the town was founded in 1764 by the pioneers who had paddled and cordelled their bateaux painfully up the river from New Orleans under Laclede as he advanced in the bold attempt to control the fur trade of half a continent with his handful of men.

The keelboat then was no more out of date than the airship is now. It was the best modern boat in 1809 which could be equipped by the capital of St. Louis, of New Orleans or of Philadelphia. Because of it Philadelphia and St. Louis commanded the east and west movement of business as that north and south was commanded by New Orleans and St. Louis, as soon as their first fleets of keelboats were regularly organized. It helped to make great history, even if it did have to be pulled up stream by a rope dragged by men on the bank.

This distance in point of change in the way things are done is almost impassable for the mind. In point of fact in St. Louis it is only a matter of the third generation between keelboat and aeroplane. In 1907 the first airship on record as crossing the Mississippi river crossed it at St. Louis during the international contests of that year. It is something to remember now as part of the record to which belongs the history of the first locomotive crossing the Mississippi at St. Louis in 1852 to complete the work of the St. Louis argonauts of 1849, crossing to the Pacific in their "prairie schooners."

If we suppose aeroplanes and airships circling in the air above the St. Louis keelboat landing of a hundred years ago we may imagine, if we can, how they appear to the men whose grandfathers not only navigated the river in keelboats, but lay flat behind the goods the boats were loaded with while they were being shot at by Indians along the banks.

It is almost if not quite as hard now to imagine what the world meant before the age of steam as it is to think out what will be its meaning in the age of the perfected airship and aeroplane. Every contrast possible in the St. Louis centennial week of pageants is a challenge to look backward and forward in the attempt to find out what a hundred years already mean, as the first success in the attempt to find what it is to mean shortly, for this generation and for the grandchildren of this generation in 2009.

The makers of the centennial week program were keenly alive to the opportunities for spectacular effect suggested by the most striking events of the world's progress. The aeronautic events such as balloon races, aeroplane and dirigible balloon contests, suggest the future possibilities of transportation in contrast with those of 1809. For comparison with automobiles and aeroplanes the bateau of Laclede's day, with its stumpy mast, its cordelle and its sweeps, is an educational feature of the water pageant, which includes crafts of all the kinds which now ply the waters of the Mississippi. The Veiled Prophet's pageant, unique and picturesque, is another feature which is full of romantic interest. The educational parade, the parade representing 3,000 of St. Louis' industries, the procession of a thousand mayors and the other events which find a place on the program all suggest that as a great week for St. Louis its centennial week is still greater, as it belongs to a hundred years of history-making for the continental United States.

The city of St. Louis was founded by Pierre Leclede Liguest in 1764. The territory west of the Mississippi river was then in possession of France. Laclede landed at the foot of what is now Market street, organized the village and resided there for 14 years. He named the new site St. Louis in honor of Louis XV., the reigning sovereign of France. The territory was transferred by France to Spain by secret treaty in 1762, but it was not announced in the new village until October, 1764. In 1803 Spain retroceded the sovereignty to France and on April 30, 1803, France sold all the territory west of the Mississippi river, known as the Louisiana purchase, to the United States for $15,000,000, Napoleon remarking: "This accession of territory strengthens forever the power of the United States."

With less than a thousand inhabitants when the whole country had not quite seven and a quarter million in 1809, St. Louis emerged from the era of the keelboat and pirogue to pioneer the steamboat on western rivers. Loading its first steamboat in 1817, it had more than doubled its population of 1810 in 1820. From 4,000 in 1820, two decades of steamboating gave it 16,469 in 1840. About that time it began its great transcontinental work with the "prairie schooner," reinforcing the steamboat in overland transit. With the transcontinental overland movement, to Oregon as well as California, growing, in 1850 it had 77,860 people and was beginning its work as the first pioneer of railroads to the Pacific. After bringing the first locomotive west of the Mississippi in 1852, it more than doubled its population in that decade, reaching 185,587 in 1860. With the foundations of the states now west of the river, already laid along its first trade routes in 1860, it advanced in the next two decades to 350,552 people. Chicago was passing it in population then, without being able to take from it its historical place as the "first great city of the west," the pioneer and founder of the west of the present. Since 1880 it has doubled its population once more, advancing from 350,000 to over 700,000. At its present rate of increase, responsive to that of the Mississippi valley, St. Louis is doubling business in a little over 10 years. Its bank clearings increased from $292,000,000 in 1869 to $3,074,000,000 in 1908. Its tonnage of merchandise received and forwarded was 26,162,000 tons for the first six months of this year. Its bank resources reported June 23, 1909, at $385,881,000, more than double the total of the tenth year back.

Such figures illustrate much more than local progress. They are mid-continental before they become local, in the sense that the people of the whole area between the Allegheny and Rocky mountains are now exerting new energies and utilizing new forces of growth, unforeseen even as late as 10 years ago. As the percentages of this growth are of course greatest west of the Mississippi river, St. Louis has almost "made itself over" in 15 years in growing up to the new growth of the country. Since it began work for the world's fair, celebrating the Louisiana purchase, it has learned to look back on itself in the last decade of the nineteenth century as "old St. Louis." In looking back to the older St. Louis of 1809, it can boast that as a frontier outpost it led the progress of the continental United States. In looking forward, in its centennial year, it can see that the greatest results of the history it has made are only the beginnings of greater results, which belong to the immediate future of the continental United States, whose progress makes the frontier town of 1809 the midcontinental city of 1909.

The Doctor's Question

Some Advice Against the Use of Harsh Purgatives and Physics.

A doctor's first question when consulted by a patient, "Are your bowels regular?" He knows that 98 per cent. of illness is attended with inactive bowels and torpid liver. This condition poisons the system with waste matter and causes accumulation of gases which must be removed through the bowels before health can be restored.

Salts, ordinary pills and cathartics may be truly likened to dynamite. Through their harsh irritating action they force a passage through the bowels, causing pain and damage to the delicate intestinal structure which weakens the whole system, and at best only produces temporary relief. The repeated use of such treatments causes chronic irritation of the stomach and bowels, dries and hardens their tissues, deadens their nerves, stiffens their muscles and generally brings about an injurious habit which sometimes has almost, if not fatal results.

We have a pleasant and safe remedy for constipation and bowel disorders in general. We are so certain of its great curative value that we promise to return the purchaser's money in every case where it fails to produce entire satisfaction. This remedy is called Rexall Orderlies. We urge you to try them at our entire risk.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten like candy, they act quietly and have a soothing, strengthening, healing, regulative influence on the entire intestinal tract. They do not purge or gripe, cause nausea, flatulence, excessive looseness, diarrhoea or other annoying effects, and they may be taken at any time without inconvenience.

Rexall Orderlies overcome the drugging habit and safely remedy constipation and associate ailments, whether acute or chronic, expect in surgical cases. They are especially good for children, weak persons or old folks. Price, 36 tablets 25 cents, and 12 tablets 10 cents. Letter From Pacific Coast.

Nothing seems to grow but sage brush. I saw some cows feeding on that, and they looked fat. I am sure a Pennsylvania cow would starve there. We crossed the Sierre Nevada Mountains. The road for nearly the whole distance across is covered with snow sheds, some said forty miles, but of course I don't know. There was some grand scenery on the mountains, but of course the sheds obstructed our view somewhat. There is no snow on the sheds now but I saw snow on a mountain not far away. But before we entered Oakland, Col., our train crossed the bay on a ferry boat. We stayed in Oakland five hours. Some of us got off the car to get a little exercise, and when we came back our car was gone. We hunted around awhile and found it sidetracked quite a long way from the depot. We were glad to find it and I firmly decided to remain in it till I reached our destination. We left Oakland about six in the evening, and in the morning we were riding along the Pacific coast, and I enjoyed looking at the grand old ocean. At Los Angeles I found my brother waiting for me. We had been separated for about twenty-five years, and so we were almost strangers, but we were very glad to see each other again. We visited a fruit stand and got some delicious peaches, grapes, figs, etc., then boarded an electric car and after a delightful ride of about 17 miles reached his beautiful home at Santa Monica. How strange everything seemed to me at first; the trees, flowers, houses, and everything is so different than they are in the east. Such magnificent palm trees, the eucalyptus or gum tree of several varieties, and the beautiful pepper tree are all curiosities to me, and then the flowers. There is no use trying to describe them, it simply cannot be done. Timothy grass does not grow here, barley is raised for hay and grain for horses, and bean straw for cows. Bean straw is the pods, leaves and stalks of the lima bean, which is raised very extensively here. Potatoes and corn are grown but no buckwheat. Fruit of many kinds are here, but oranges do not grow so near the coast. The weather is delightful, not so warm in summer as it is in Pennsylvania. The nights are cool, and there is a delicious breeze from the ocean during the day. There has been no rain since February, with the exceptions of a couple of light showers, until October 2. Of course things are not looking at their best now, and will look much better when the rainy season is here. Santa Monica is a beautiful city, though the houses nearly all look small to me, but it is so lovely out of doors that one does not need to care much about houses.

Ocean Park and Venice, suburbs of Santa Monica, are beautiful summer resorts on the beach. There is beauty everywhere, but my descriptive powers are not equal to the task of conveying to your minds even a faint idea of things as they really are. I wish you could all see it and enjoy it with me. I am having a good time, though I often think of the loved ones far away. I am glad to be able to tell you that I found Seventh Day Adventists and have the privilege of attending meetings with them every Sabbath. I feel very grateful to my Heavenly Father, for His protecting care during my long journey, and earnestly pray that He may bless and keep you all, and that we may meet again, either in this life, or in the earth made new, where there will be no partings and all is joy and everlasting beauty and glory.

The Fascinating Career of "Miss Petticoats."

The heroine of this famous play caught the attention of the play-going public immediately on its production at the great Boston Theatre, and made a production hit because of her very original and charming personality. When first dramatized from the book and produced at the Boston Theatre about five years ago, it scored an immense success, and the critics were unananimous in pronouncing it "a strong emotional play, full of wholesome comedy and a quaint wit, that appeals to an old theatre-goer." Therein was the secret of the success of "Miss Petticoats." It pleased the old habitue of the theatre, who is looking for a new sensation, and found in this original play that pungent; spicy atmosphere which is like the real New England people themselves, where the play was laid. No more interesting scene can be imagined than the shores of an old whaling port like New Bedford, where in the quaint cabin home of a derelict whaler Agatha Benier, called "Miss Petticoats" as a pet name by her grand-father, made her home until brought into the high and mighty seats of the rich. She graduates even from that set to the artistic circles of Paris, where as the Countess Fornay she creates a sensation, and finally returning to her native land, triumphs over all her former enemies, who have made her life interesting to her and the audience. There are many droll and unique characters peculiar to New England, who furnish forth great fun and frolic, that give the play a delightfully fresh environment. A powerful company, who carry their own new and artistic scenery descriptive of these fascinating scenes, will present "Miss Petticoats" at the Emporium Opera House in the near future.

HANDICAPPED

This is the Case With Many Emporium People.

Too many Emporium citizens are handicapped with a bad back. The unceasing pain causes conatant misery, making work a burden and sleeping or lifting an impossibility. The back aches at night, preventing refreshing rest and in the morning is stiff and lame. Plasters and liniments may give relief, but cannot reach the cause. To eliminate the pains and aches you must cure the kidneys.

Duan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently.

The following statement should convince every Emporium reader of their efficiency.

J. W. Lahive, 126 Grant St., Ridgway, Pa., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have been of such great benefit that I can highly recommend them. For years I was more or less troubled with kidney complaint and suffered acutely from pains in my side. This trouble inconvenienced me in many ways and I knew that it arose from disordered kidneys, as the secretions were unnatural and distressing in passage. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills and immediately procured a box. In a short time I felt better in every way. I am glad to give Doan's Kidney Pills my recommendation."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Harrington-Fountain.

Mr. William Harrington and Miss Belle Fountain, while visiting at Niagara Falls, Friday, Oct 1st, in company with their colored friends, gave the rest of their party the slip while in Buffalo, calling on Rev. F. H. Corman, pastor of Asbury Methodist Episcopal church and were united in marriage. The bride is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Fountain, respected and well-to-do colored citizens of Emporium, is a member of the Baptist church and Sunday school and a young lady well calculated to make a good wife. The groom has resided in Emporium for more than twenty years, being employed for several years in the employ of Dr. S. S. Smith as coachman. Everybody knows "Shorty," the good natured, jolly fellow. While the wedding was a surprise to all, especially the parents of the bride, all is forgiven and happiness reigns on West Allegany avenue, where the newly married couple will be presented with a home by the indulgent parents of the bride who have reared a family of well behaved and well educated children. Congratulations are in order.

The Old Soldiers' Candidate.

The old soldiers of Pennsylvania heartily are supporting the Republican ticket this year. They realize that is is a good ticket and that it ought to be elected. But there is an especial reason for their loyalty to the Republican party in this campaign. One of the candidates was selected from their ranks. J. A. Stober has the respect and confidence of his comrades in the Grand Army as he has of everbody who knows him. In nominating him for the important office of State Treasurer, the Republican party gladly recognized the men who fought for the nation's life. At the Harrisburg convention Major M. H. Gherst, former Department Commander of the Grand Army, told the delegates what the veterans of Pennsylvania think of Mr. Stober:

"His name and reputation are synonyms of honor and integrity," said Major Gherst. "His record in the past is the best guarantee of the future. If elected to the great office of State Treasurer, he will bring to the discharge of its responsible duties that same courage that impelled him to lay aside the pursuits and avocations of a peaceful life in the country's darkest hour, put on the uniform of his government, prepared to follow the fortunes of his flag."

The veterans of Pennsylvania will agree that every syllable of that statement is true. Mr. Stober will have the earnest support of his comrades and their sons, because he is worthy of their support. The country owes the soldiers of the Civil War more than it can ever pay them, a debt of gratitude. Through the Republican party it has done much in acknowledgement of this obligation. The Republican Party in Pennsylvania and in the nation is the old soldiers' party. When the veterans of Pennsylvania go to the polls in November, they will perform the agreeable duty of honoring one of their own number, as well as vote for a continuance of good government in this State.

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens with the shipwreck of the steamer on which Miss Genevieve Leslie, an American heiress, Lord Winthrope, an Englishman, and Tom Blake, a brusque American, were passengers. The three were tossed upon an uninhabited island and were the only ones not drowned. Blake recovered from a drunken stupor. Blake, shunned on the boat, because of his roughness, became a hero as preserver of the helpless pair. The Englishman was suing for the hand of Miss Leslie. Blake started to swim back to the ship to recover what was left. Blake returned safely. Winthrope wasted his last match on a cigarette, for which he was scored by Blake. Their first meal was a dead fish. The trio started a ten mile hike for higher land. Thirst attacked them. Blake was compelled to carry Miss Leslie on account of weariness. He taunted Winthrope. They entered the jungle. That night was passed roosting high in a tree. The next morning they descended to the open again.

CHAPTER VI.—Continued.

"How wide is it?" inquired Winthrope, gazing at his swollen hands.

"About 300 yards at high tide. May be narrower at ebb."

"Could you not build a raft?" suggested Miss Leslie.

Blake smiled at her simplicity. "Why not a boat? We've got a penknife."

"Well, then, I can swim."

"Bully for you! Guess, though, we'll try something else. The river is chuck full of alligators. What you waiting for, Pat? We haven't got all day to fool around here."

Winthrope twisted the creeper about his leg and slid to the ground, doing all he could to favor his hands. He found that he could walk without pain, and at once stepped over beside Blake's club, glancing nervously around at the jungle.

Blake jerked up the end of the creeper, and passed the loop about Miss Leslie. Before she had time to become frightened he swung her over and lowered her to the ground lightly as a feather. He followed, hand under hand, and stood for a moment beside her, staring at the dew-dripping foliage of the jungle. Then the remains of the night's quarry caught his eye, and he walked over to examine them.

"Say, Pat," he called, "these don't look like deer bones. I'd say—yes; there's the feet—it's a pig."

"Any tusks?" demanded Winthrope.

Miss Leslie looked away. A heap of bones, however cleanly gnawed, is not a pleasant sight. The skull of the animal seemed to be missing; but Blake stumbled upon it in a tuft of grass and kicked it out upon the open ground. Every shred of hide and gristle had been gnawed from it by the jackals; yet if there had been any doubt as to the creature's identity there was evidence to spare in the savage tusks which projected from the jaws.

"Je-rusalem!" observed Blake; "this old boar must have been something of a scrapper his own self."

"In India they have been known to kill a tiger. Can you knock out the tusks?"

"What for?"

"Well, you said we had nothing for arrow points—"

"Good boy! We'll cinch them and ask questions later."

A few blows with the club loosened the tusks. Blake handed them over to Winthrope, together with the whisky flask, and led the way to the half-broken patch through the thicket. A free use of his club made the path a little more worthy of the name, and as there was less need of haste than on the previous evening, Winthrope and Miss Leslie came through with only a few fresh scratches. Once on open ground again, they soon gained the fallen palms.

At a word from Blake, Miss Leslie hastened to fetch nuts for Winthrope to husk and open. Blake, who had plucked three leaves from a fan palm near the edge of the jungle, began to split long shreds from one of the huge leaves of a cocoanut palm. This gave him a quantity of coarse, stiff fiber, part of which he twisted in a cord and used to tie one of the leaves of the fan palm over her head.

"How's that for a bonnet?" he demanded.

The improvised head-gear bore so grotesque a resemblance to a recent type of picture hat that Winthrope could not repress a derisive laugh. Miss Leslie, however, examined the hat and gave her opinion without a sign of amusement. "I think it is splendid, Mr. Blake. If we must go out in the sun again, it is just the thing to protect one."

"Yes. Here's two more I've fixed for you. Ready yet, Winthrope?"

The Englishman nodded, and the three sat down to their third feast of cocoanuts. They were hungry enough at the start, and Blake added no little keenness even to his own appetite by a grim joke on the slender prospects of the next meal, to the effect that if in the meantime not eaten themselves they might possibly find their next meal within a week.

"But if we must move, could we not take some of the nuts with us?" suggested Winthrope.

Blake pondered over this as he ate, and when fully satisfied he helped himself up with his club he motioned the others to remain seated.

"There are your hats and the strings," he said, "but you won't need them now. I'm going to take a prospect along the river, and while I'm gone, you can make a try at stringing nuts on some of this leaf fiber."

"But, Mr. Blake, do you think it's quite safe?" asked Miss Leslie, and she glanced from him to the jungle.

"Safe?" he repeated. "Well, nothing ate you yesterday, if that's anything to go by. It's all I know about it."

He did not wait for further protests. Swinging his club on his shoulder he started for the break in the jungle which marked the hippopotamus path. The others looked at each other, and Miss Leslie sighed. "If only he were a gentleman!" she complained.

Winthrope turned abruptly to the cocoanuts.

CHAPTER VII.

Around the Headland.

It was mid morning before Blake reappeared. He came from the mangrove swamp where it ran down into the sea. His trousers were smeared to the thigh with slimy mud; but as he approached the drooping brim of his palm-leaf hat failed to hide his exultant expression.

"Come on!" he called. "I've struck it. We'll be over in half an hour."

"How's that?" asked Winthrope.

"Bar," answered Blake, hurrying forward. "Sling on your hats and get into my coat again, Miss Jenny. The sun's hot as yesterday. How about the nuts?"

"Here they are. Three strings; all that I fancied we could carry," explained Winthrope.

"All right. The big one is mine, I suppose. I'll take two. We'll leave the other. Lean on me if your ankle is still weak."

"Thanks; I can make it alone. But must we go through mud like that?"

"Not on this side, at least. Come on! We don't want to miss the ebb."

Blake's impatience discouraged further inquiries. He had turned as he spoke, and the others followed him, walking close together. The pace was sharp for Winthrope, and his ankle soon began to twinge. He was compelled to accept Miss Leslie's invitation to take her arm. With her help he managed to keep within a few yards of Blake.

Instead of plunging into the mangrove wood, which here was undergrown with a thicket of giant ferns, Blake skirted around in the open until they came to the seashore. The tide was at its lowest, and he waved his club towards a long sand pit which curved out around the seaward edge of the mangroves. Whether this was part of the river's bar or had been heaped up by the cyclone would have been beyond Winthrope's knowledge had the question occurred to him. It was enough for him that the sand was smooth and hard as a race track.

Presently the party came to the end of the spit, where the river water rippled over the sand with the last feeble out-suck of the ebb. On their right they had a sweeping view of the river, around the flank of the mangrove screen. Blake halted at the edge of the water and half turned.

"Close up," he said. "It's shallow enough; but do you see those logs over on the mud-bank? Those are alligators."

"Mercy—and you expect me to wade among such creatures?" cried Miss Leslie.

"I went almost across an hour ago and they didn't bother me any. Come on! There's a wind in that cloud out seaward. Inside half an hour the surf'll be rolling up on this bar like all Niagara."

"If we must, we must, Miss Genevieve," urged Winthrope. "Step behind me and gather up your skirts. It's best to keep one's clothes dry in the tropics."

The girl blushed, and retained his arm.

"I prefer to help you," she replied.

"Come on!" called Blake, and he splashed out into the water.

The others followed within arm's-length, nervously conscious of the rows of motionless reptiles on the mud-flat, not 100 yards distant.

In the center of the bar, where the water was a trifle over knee-deep, some large creature came darting downstream beneath the surface and passed with a violent swirl between Blake and his companions. At Miss Leslie's scream, Blake whirled about and jabbed with his club at the supposed alligator.

"Where's the brute? Has he got you?" he shouted.

"No, no; he went by!" gasped Winthrope. "There he is!"

A long bony snout, fringed on either side by a row of lateral teeth, was flung up into view.

"Sawfish!" said Blake, and he waded on across the bar without further comment.

Miss Leslie had been on the point of fainting. The tone of Blake's voice revived her instantly.

There were no more scares. A few minutes later they waded out upon a stretch of clean sand on the south of the river. Before them the beach lay in a flattened curve, which at the far end hooked sharply to the left and appeared to terminate at the foot of the towering limestone cliffs of the headland. A mile or more inland the river jungle edged in close to the cliffs; but from there to the beach the forest was separated from the wall of rock by a little sandy plain, covered with creeping plants and small palms. The greatest width of the open space was hardly more than a quarter of a mile.

Blake paused for a moment at high-tide mark, and Winthrope instantly squatted down to nurse his ankle.

"I say, Blake," he said, "can't you find me some kind of a crutch? It is only a few yards around to those trees."

"Good Lord! you haven't been fool enough to overstrain that ankle—Yes, you have. Dammit! why couldn't you tell me before?"

"It did not feel so painful in the water."

"I helped the best I could," interposed Miss Leslie. "I think if you could get Mr. Winthrope a crutch—"

"Crutch!" growled Blake. "How long do you think it would take me to wade through the mud? And look at that cloud! We're in for a squall. Here!"

He handed the girl the smaller string of cocoanuts, flung the other up the beach and stooped for Winthrope to mount his back. He then started off along the beach at a sharp trot. Miss Leslie followed as best she could, the heavy cocoanuts swinging about with every step and bruising her tender body.

The wind was coming faster than Blake had calculated. Before they had run 200 paces they heard the roar of rain-lashed water, and the squall struck them with a force that almost overthrew the girl. With the wind came torrents of rain that drove through their thickest garments and drenched them to the skin within the first half-minute.

Blake slackened his pace to a walk and plodded sullenly along beneath the driving downpour. He kept to the lower edge of the beach, where the sand was firmest, for the force of the falling deluge beat down the waves and held in check the breakers which the wind sought to roll up the beach.

The rain storm was at its height when they reached the foot of the cliffs. The gray rock towered above them 30 or 40 feet high. Blake deposited Winthrope upon a wet ledge and straightened up to scan the headland. Here and there ledges ran more than half-way up the rocky wall; in other places the crest was notched by deep clefts; but nowhere within sight did either offer a continuous path to the summit. Blake grunted with disgust.

"It'd take a fire ladder to get up this side," he said. "We'll have to try the other, if we can get around the point. I'm going on ahead. You can follow, after Pat has rested his ankle. Keep a sharp eye out for anything in the flint line—quartz or agate. That means fire. Another thing, when this rain blows over, don't let your clothes dry on you. I've got my hands full enough without having to nurse you through malarial fever. Don't forget the cocoanuts, and if I don't show up by noon save me some."

He stooped to drink from a pool in the rock which was overflowing with the cool, pure rainwater, and started off at his sharpest pace. Winthrope and Miss Leslie, seated side by side in dripping misery, watched him swing away through the rain without energy enough to call out a parting word.

Beneath the cliff the sand beach was succeeded by a talus of rocky debris which in places sloped up from the water 10 or 15 feet. The lower part of the slope consisted of bowlders and water-worn stones, over which the surf, reinforced by the rising tide, was beginning to break with an angry roar.

Blake picked his way quickly over the smaller stones near the top of the slope, now and then bending to snatch up a fragment that seemed to differ from the others. Finding nothing but limestone he soon turned his attention solely to the passage around the headland. Here he had expected to find the surf much heavier. But the shore was protected by a double line of reefs, so close in that channel between did not show a whitecap. This was fortunate, since in places the talus here sank down almost to the level of low tide. Even a moderate surf would have rendered farther progress impracticable.

Another 100 paces brought Blake to the second corner of the cliff, which jutted out in a little point. He clambered around it and stopped to survey the coast beyond. Within the last few minutes the squall had blown over and the rain began to moderate its downpour. The sun, bursting through the clouds, told that the storm was almost past, and its flood of direct light cleared the view.

Canal That Russia Needs.

Russia's ministry of ways and communications has appointed a board of engineers to make preliminary surveys for the long-projected canal to connect the Baltic with the Black sea. The canal, in the making of which several rivers will be turned to account, will have its northern end at Riga on the Gulf of Riga, 309 miles southwest of St. Petersburg, while the southern end will be Kherson, on the right bank of the Dnieper, and 92 miles east-northeast of Odessa. When this project is completed Russia may move her own ships to and from the Black sea without asking permission.

Pennsylvania Happenings

The 1909 issue of Smull's legislative handbook is to be issued soon. The final proofs are now being read.

The state highway department has decided to build a new road in Dalton borough, Lackawanna county. Bids will be closed next month.

The first court trial involving the alum clause of the new food law will be held at Hollidaysburg. The grocery trade is largely interested.

Deputies of the factory inspection department have begun to vigorously enforce the order of Chief Delaney. Some suits are expected but the order will stand.

Over 120 indictments have been found at Pittsburg against persons and firms for the illegal sale of oleo. On top of this, three persons were convicted recently.

Deputy Secretary of Agriculture Martin has been elected as the Pennsylvania representative of the United States agricultural and industrial exposition board.

There are no cases of smallpox in the state at present according to the reports made to the state department of health. Typhoid showed but a sight increase last month.

Th state dairy and food division has completed the issuance of 50 oleo licenses for the coming quarter, making the largest business in that line ever done. The sum realized was $1,200.

The fall meeting of the state library board was held at the executive department recently with the governor presiding. A number of purchases and changes were discussed and arrangements made for the legislative reference bureau work.

Considerable inquiry is being made about the game laws and the officers of the game commission are besieged with men from all parts of the state for information. Dr. Kalbfus says he thinks this is going to be a good game year.

The manager of the paper mill at Williamsburg has been fined by a Blair county justice for discharging poisonous matter from his mill into a tributary of the Juniata. The case will be appealed and the fish commission will handle the state's end.

Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust recently ordered suits to be brought in Pittsburg against dealers who have been selling sausage adulterated with water and flour. He says that the mixture costs about three and a half cents a pound and is sold for 15 cents. Arrests for sale of "doped" flour has been ordered at Butler.

The season for bear and woodcock has opened in this state and both are reported plentiful. There are said to be fine lots of woodcock in many eastern counties. The woodcock season runs until December 1 and 50 birds can be killed by one person, but not more than ten a day. The bear season runs until January 1 and there is no limit.

The state forestry commission has authorized the purchase of 12,450 acres of forest land in four counties, divided as follows: 6,000 in Clinton, 5,000 in Cameron and 1,450 in Perry and Franklin. The latter will be added to the Pennypacker reserve which now contains almost 18,000 acres. The total area of the state's reservations, exclusive of purchases authorized, is 925,000 acres.

As a result of a hearing held recently by Deputy Attorney General Cunningham in the complaints against Western Pennsylvania companies for the sale of ice made at their plants the attorney general's department has issued a warning that the Pittsburg and Independent Brewing companies must stop selling ice or allowing inside corporations to sell it. Threats of an action for quo warranto are made if the companies persist. It is said that the gift of ice is also prohibited.

Auditor General Robert K. Young's recent prediction that the state revenues for this year would break records appears to be coming true as the amount of collections made by this department went over the $25,000,000 mark, the income for the day being over $201,000 in round numbers. The general's department has 60 days in which to best the record of $26,425,866 of actual receipts in 1907 or $27,027,132 gross because of the sale of bonds. The total of the income to date is about $2,000,000 ahead of the same day last year. There are some big accounts outstanding and the receipts the remainder of the fiscal year will be large.

The bills for the primaries held in June are slow in coming in. It is expected that they will be entered before the end of the year.

The auditor general's department has entered suit against Clay W. Evans, sheriff of Schuylkill county, under the act of 1901, holding him responsible for state taxes on the property of a corporation. It is charged that Evans as sheriff sold the property of a corporation in January without giving notice to the state, which had a claim for taxes.

Guess Where She Is From.

The head of the house had been ill for many months, and had lost his appetite entirely.

"I can't seem to fix anything that he'll enjoy and he hardly eats anything," the mistress was saying to the maid, who was a new arrival from the old country.

"That's always the way," returned the girl. "They're all the same, them invalids. All they want is nothing at all, and then when you bring it to them they don't eat it."

Summer Conquests.

"Are these all photographs of fellows you have been engaged to?"

"No. They're the fellows who didn't propose."

"What in the world do you want of them?"

"Why; I am saving them to make a rogues' gallery."

When a man begins to tell a woman about his past love affairs he is planning to add another to the list.

Feeding Farm Hands.

Every farmer's wife knows what tremendous appetites farm hands usually have; but while they eat well they work well, too.

Here's a good suggestion about feeding farm hands. Give them plenty of Quaker Oats. A big dish of Quaker Oats porridge with sugar and cream or milk is the greatest breakfast in the world for a man who needs vigor and strength for a long day's work. The man that eats Quaker Oats plentifully and often is the man who does good work without excessive fatigue. There is a sustaining quality in Quaker Oats not found in other foods, and for economy it is at the head of the list. Besides the regular size packages Quaker Oats is packed in large size family packages, with and without china. 5

Would Find Use for It.

After a day and a night spent in answering telephone calls from people who wanted the latest news from Peary and Dr. Cook, the secretary of one of the arctic clubs had retired for a well-earned rest, when the persistent 'phone bell rang again. A voice at the other end said:

"Do you want the ambulance sent right over?"

"What ambulance?" roared the irate secretary.

"Why, the one you sent for."

"I sent for no ambulance."

"You lie!"

The secretary gasped, then he screamed into the 'phone:

"Send it as soon as possible, and you come over, too, and I'll send you back in it!"

On a Time Limitation.

In spite of the reputation for latitudinarianism he gained from his early trial for heresy, the late Prof. Jowett of Oxford was intolerant of pretentiousness and shallow conceit. One self-satisfied undergraduate met the master one day. "Master," he said, "I have searched everywhere in all philosophies, ancient and modern, and nowhere do I find the evidence of a God." "Mr. ——," replied the master, after a shorter pause than usual, "if you don't find a God by five o'clock this afternoon you must leave this college."

Come Home, Mother.

Mother, dear mother, come home from the club, and rustle some supper for me; 'tis time you were here working over the grub and getting things ready for tea. The table's not set nor the teakettle boiled, the vegetables are not prepared; no wonder my temper and feelings are roiled, though 'tis doubtful, indeed, if you cared. Come home, come home, come ho-ho-home! Yes, cut your symposium down a wee bit, dear mother, and hustle right home!—Los Angeles Express.

CHILDREN SHOWED IT
Effect of Their Warm Drink in the Morning.

A year ago I was a wreck from coffee drinking and was on the point of giving up my position in the schoo' room because of nervousness.

"I was telling a friend about it and she said, 'We drink nothing at meal time but Postum, and it is such a comfort to have something we can enjoy drinking with the children.'

"I was astonished that she would allow the children to drink any kind of coffee, but she said Postum was the most healthful drink in the world for children as well as for older ones, and that the condition of both the children and adults showed that to be a fact.

"My first trial was a failure. The cook boiled it four or five minutes and it tasted so flat that I was in despair but determined to give it one more trial. This time we followed the directions and boiled it fifteen minutes after the boiling began. It was a decided success and I was completely won by its rich delicious flavour. In a short time I noticed a decided improvement in my condition and kept growing better month after month, until now I am perfectly healthy, and do my work in the school room with ease and pleasure. I would not return to the nerve-destroying regular coffee for any money."

For the Hostess

Chat on Topics of Many Kinds, by a Recognized Authority

An Animal Party.

This clever animal party may be utilized for guests either old or young. It is also adaptable for the needs of church societies, which are always in search of schemes to break the monotony, especially at the very commencement of an evening affair.

As each person enters a slip of paper containing the name of an animal is to be pinned upon his back and he is told he must guess from the conversation of those around him what animal he is supposed to represent. Then pass booklets ornamented with cute little "Teddy" bears and pencils. On a door have a poster of the animals going two by two into the ark and the words, "This Way to the Greatest Show on Earth." Admit the guests in groups to this room, where the cages containing the animals will be found, allowing ten minutes for each group to guess what the cages contain. Here is a list of animals which may be added to by individual hostesses: "Kid" (a glove of kid), "Lynx" (links of a chain), "Rat" hair rat), "Monkey" (letters M O N and a door key), "Chamois (a piece of chamois), "Lion" (a doll's pillow, "Goat" (a small piece of butter), "Peacock" (a dried pea and a toy rooster), "Bear" (a tiny undressed doll), "Eagle," (the letter E and a picture of a sea gull).

The cages (boxes crossed with wire) were numbered, and the guests wrote down what they supposed the animal was in the booklet opposite a corresponding number. Animal candy boxes are good for prizes. Then have a contest to see who can come the nearest pinning a goat's whiskers on in the proper place, the contestant to be blindfolded.

Serve an ice, "animal" cookies and barley sugar animals.

Japanese Fan-Tan.

At a Japanese affair this delectable concoction was served. I give the recipe as it came to me feeling sure it will be very welcome, as many calls for just such a dish come to the department.

To make fan-tan, cook half cupful of well-washed rice in a pint of milk until very soft. Stir in a heaping tablespoonful of sugar and one well-beaten egg and remove at once from the fire. Mix in a half cupful of assorted candied fruits, cherries, apricots and pine apple, and turn into a shallow, well-ubttered pan to cool. When firm cut into strips about an inch and a half wide and three inches long; dip in egg and breadcrumbs and brown delicately on both sides in butter. Drain, dust with powdered sugar and serve hot.

Announcing an Engagement.

The hostess had asked eight girls to luncheon and no one expected the interesting news that was announced in this fashion: The centerpiece was a low mound-shaped form of white roses known as "bride," and there was a delicate fringe around them of maiden-hair ferns and mignonette. Over this from the chandelier swung a cluster of white wedding bells; they were tied with fluffy tulle streamers The place cards were little standing cards of a bride and bridegroom cut out, and it did not take long to discover that the faces were photographs of the young woman, who was soon discovered to be the honored guest, and the lucky man, who it was discovered, was to lead her to the altar. This menu was served: Chilled canteloup, cream of spinach soup, fillets of fresh fish fried in olive oil, with sauce tartare; creamed sweetbreads, green peas in timbals, finger rolls, fruit salad, with cheese and bar-le-duc, pineapple sherbet, small cakes, coffee.

Cuticura Thus Proven Pure and Sweet.

A New York friend of Cuticura writes:

"My three year old son and heir, after being put to bed on a trip across the Atlantic, investigated the stateroom and located a box of graham crackers and a box of Cuticura Ointment. When a search was made for the box, it was found empty and the kid admitted that he had eaten the contents of the entire box spread on the crackers. It cured him of a bad cold and I don't know what else."

No more conclusive evidence could be offered that every ingredient of Cuticura Ointment is absolutely pure, sweet and harmless. If it may be safely eaten by a young child, none but the most beneficial results can be expected to attend its application to even the tenderest skin or youngest infant.

THE DIAGNOSIS

"Anything really serious with my eye, Doc?"

"No, no—simply a pig-sty."

And He Suffered.

Little Willie, suffering from an attack of toothache, had paid his first visit to the dentist, accompanied by his mother. Father, on his return from the office that evening, was naturally much interested.

"Didn't it hurt?" asked father.

"Sure, it hurt," replied Willie.

"Weren't you scared when the dentist put you in that big chair and started all those zizz-zizz-zizz things?"

"Oh, not so much."

"That was a brave boy. But, surely, you suffered?"

"Of course I suffered. But I just kept repeating over and over the golden text we had in Sunday school last Sunday."

"The golden text? What was it?"

"Why, 'Suffer little children to come unto me,'" replied Willie, glibly. "I kept saying that over and over to myself, and the first thing I knew it didn't hurt any more."

Ours and Theirs.

"A play on names unconsciously perpetrated by my youngest son was very funny," said a Flatbush man the other day. "We live next door to a family named Feitenour, and the other night while my family was busy reading in the library we heard a racket on the back porch. My son went out to investigate, and on his return my wife, always inquisitive, asked what had caused the noise.

"'Nothin' but a couple of cats,' Jim told her, and then I heard her ask: 'Did you see whose they were?'

"'Yes; one was ours and the other was Feitenour's.'"

Weakened by Alcohol.

Dr. Bertillon, the eminent French vital statistician, has shown that tuberculosis is twice as prevalent among the retail liquor dealers of France as among other shopkeepers. He attributes it to the fact that the alcohol which they handle and use all day long weakens their bodies and thus renders them more susceptible to the disease germ.

The dwelling house of B. F. Ross, of Wharton, Pa., was totally destroyed by fire, with most of the contents, early last Thursday morning. Mr. Ross built a fire in the kitchen stove, and went to the barn to do do some chores, and on his return found the house on fire and past any chance of saving it. We understand there was $1,000 insurance on the house and $200 on the contents, of which but little were saved. The house was built some 60 years ago by W. T. Jones and was used for years as a hotel. The barn was burned two or three years ago and is supposed to have been set on fire by a tramp.

On the first two days of the bear season, C. E. Logue brought in two bears alive, having roped them and brought them in all by himself. A few days later Bert. Nelson brought in one alive with Wes. More Than Enough is Too Much.

To maintain health, a mature man or woman needs just enough food to repair the waste and supply energy and body heat. The habitual consumption of more food than is necessary for these purposes is the prime cause of stomach troubles, rheumatism and disorders of the kidneys. If troubled with indigestion, revise your diet, let reason and not appetite control and take a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and you will soon be all right again. Munson, Democratic Nominee For Supreme Court, Criticised.

HIS TACTICS CONDEMNED

Touching Elbows With All Kinds of Politicians In Tour of the State and With a Pathetic Appeal For "Complimentary" Votes From Republicans.

[Special Correspondence.]

Harrisburg, Oct. 12.

Members of the judiciary and lawyers generally throughout Pennsylvania are commenting adversely upon the remarkable campaign that is being conducted by C. LaRue Munson, the Democratic nominee for associate justice of the supreme court, in his own behalf.

This ambitious gentleman has cast aside all regard for precedent and has ignored traditions of the legal profession in making a political canvass for election to the highest judicial tribunal in the commonwealth.

It has apparently not occurred to Mr. Munson that the proprieties of the situation should prompt an aspirant for an office of this exalted character to respect the sentiment of the people which has been manifested upon many an occasion in absolute hostility to anything calculated to bring the judiciary into the game of politics or to besmirch the judicial ermine with the contaminating influence of a personal political campaign.

Pronounced Public Sentiment.

In Pennsylvania, probably more than in any other state, has it been agreed that candidates for the supreme bench should refrain from any act that might be construed as appealing for or soliciting votes or to influence a political campaign in any particular.

That an aspirant for the greatest office of a judicial nature in the gift of the people of the state should be found going from county to county, from borough to borough, from ward to ward, in a mad hunt for votes, touching elbows with all sorts and manner of men, good, bad and indifferent, with no evidence of a realization of the undignified, unwholesome and dangerous character of the canvass, has called forth a storm of protests such as would startle a man of ordinary sensibilities.

A Judge's High Ideals.

Judge Robert von Moschzisker, ever since he was honored with a unanimous nomination for the supreme bench, has refrained from taking any part whatever in the political campaign. He spent the summer in Nova Scotia, and since his return has been industriously engaged in the performance of his judicial duties in the court of common pleas of Philadelphia. He has declined every invitation to address meetings, to attend receptions of a political character or to participate in public dinners where any reference might be made to his candidacy.

In his speech of acceptance of the nomination, Judge von Moschzisker showed how much he respected public sentiment. Among other things he said:

> The candidate for judicial office occupies a different position from other candidates. Under our customs he is nominated by the party convention and may reasonably look for the usual party support, but he is not in a position to discuss politics or the policies of his party, for the reason that when elected to the bench he has nothing whatever to do with politics or the carrying out of party policies. In fact, it becomes his duty, when elected, to forget that he was a candidate of any particular party and to proceed to administer the law for the whole people without regard to any principles or policies, save the principles of the law as he is given the power to understand them. Fortunately, these ideas have become fixed in Pennsylvania, and it is not my desire to make any departure therefrom.

Not a single word or a single act of Judge von Moschzisker since that day can be pointed to that might be even twisted into a suggestion of an appeal for a solitary vote.

Policy of a Politician.

How different with his opponent, Mr. Munson. Mr. Munson is now on a tour of the state, shaking hands with all who will honor him with an opportunity to do so. A complete political machine, entirely independent of the regular Democratic state committee, has been running in his special interest ever since he entered the race. Canvassers are out in the state, letters are being written to Republicans soliciting their support for his candidacy, and individual appeals are being made for "complimentary" votes for Mr. Munson from men of the majority party.

Every precinct politician understands the old "complimentary vote game."

It has been worked time and again to fool the unsophisticated, and it has time and again been successful.

What is a complimentary vote?

It is just the same as any other vote, only that it is usually a vote gotten under false representation. The theory of the man who goes after votes of this character is that the man from whom he asks a complimentary vote is so ignorant that he does not know that he is voting against his party, his party nominee and his party's principles, just as positively and just as effectually as the man who has always been out in the open as an avowed political enemy of the party from whom the complimentary vote is solicited.

C. LaRue Munson, the Democratic nominee for associate justice of the supreme court of Pennsylvania, nominated in a Bourbon Democratic convention and placed upon a Bourbon Democratic platform, in which every principle of Republicanism is attacked, and particularly the fundamental principle of protection, which is a vital issue in the present campaign, presents a unique spectacle in the present contest in appealing for votes, complimentary or otherwise, from Republicans of the Keystone State.

As the personal director of his own canvass, Mr. Munson should take himself into council and decide to abandon his present political campaign out of deference to the unquestionable and unquestioned public sentiment.

If he shall do this, his standing with the bar of Pennsylvania, after his overwhelming defeat on Nov. 2, will at least not be as low as it otherwise would be.

GOV. STUART SHOWS THE WAY

Popular Executive Lauds the Republican Nominees.

PENROSE SOUNDS A WARNING

Philadelphia to Stand Loyally by the Full Party Ticket, and Importance of Big Vote In State Is Dwelt Upon.

[Special Correspondence.]

Philadelphia, Oct. 12.

With Governor Stuart presiding at the opening meeting of the campaign, the largest Republican rally ever held in South Philadelphia, the canvass for the state and local candidates may be said to be fairly under way.

That every man on the Republican city ticket will be elected by at least 50,000 majority is the confident prediction of those in a position to gauge public sentiment and that Judge von Moschzisker, Philadelphia's representative on the state ticket and his colleagues, Messrs. Sisson and Stober, will poll the full party vote, is conceded on every hand.

There is a spectacular campaign being waged by a few malcontents against the local Republican ticket, with the aid of the Wanamaker newspapers.

The fact that all of the independent newspapers are this time refusing to foster the schemes of the Van Valkenburg political bureau is a source of chagrin to the old-time insurgents.

The great mass of the public spirited citizens are in line with the Republican party.

Governor Leads the Way.

Governor Stuart's attitude is truly representative of the thought of the best citizenship of the community.

In his address opening the campaign the governor among other things said:

"I am here tonight in behalf of the Republican ticket, at a Republican meeting, to speak in favor and to use my best efforts, and by my presence, to show my sympathy with the Republican ticket, and my interest in the success of that ticket in state, city and county, at this time, in Philadelphia.

"The state ticket is headed by a candidate whom you well know, and that position is justice of the supreme court.

"That gentleman has been nominated by the Republican party for the office of justice of the supreme court, and the name of the gentleman is Judge von Moschzisker, a resident of Philadelphia county, and a member of the Philadelphia bar, and he has filled the position as a member of one of our courts for the past seven years; a young man of undoubted ability and integrity, and a man, to my mind, who will make one of the greatest jurists of this commonwealth. By reason of his position as a candidate for the supreme court of Pennsylvania, he will not be here tonight."

He then paid a tribute to each of the local candidates, and in presenting Messrs. Sisson and Stober, the state nominees, who were present at the meeting, he was very felicitous.

Tribute For Penrose.

Not only was the initial meeting of the canvass a great and imposing affair, but on the following night there was a great demonstration given in honor of Senator Penrose by the workingmen of Kensington in recognition of his services in formulating the new tariff bill.

This was undoubtedly the greatest gathering of the kind ever held in this city. It was an expression of loyalty to the Republican party, which will be evinced, as they said, in a practical way in the vote at the coming election.

The nominees on the Republican state ticket had a conference with Colonel Wesley R. Andrews, chairman of the Republican state committee, this week, and report that the receptions accorded them in every place they have visited have been spontaneous and cordial in their enthusiasm. They are assured that there are no defections or dissensions anywhere, and that they can expect the full party vote at the coming election.

The schedule of meetings for this week include visits to Uniontown, Greensburg, Huntingdon, Lebanon, Honesdale, Scranton and Wilkes-Barre.

How Prof. Anderson Invented Foods Shot from Guns

He was seeking a way to break up starch granules, so the digestive juices could get to them.

Cooking or baking only begins to do that. No old-time method breaks up all of the granules.

So he conceived the idea of blasting those granules to pieces by an explosion of steam.

And these foods resulted—the most delicious, most digestible cereal foods ever created.

Each kernel, by the explosion, is puffed to eight times size. It is made four times as porous as bread.

It is made nut-like and crisp, ready to melt in the mouth.

They are made so enticing that children delight in them. Grown folks, too.

They are so irresistible that seventeen million dishes were consumed last month.

When will you find them out?

Puffed Wheat—10c Puffed Rice—15c

These are the foods invented by Prof. Anderson, and this is his curious process:

The whole wheat or rice kernels are put into sealed guns. Then the guns are revolved for sixty minutes in a heat of 550 degrees.

That fierce heat turns the moisture in the grain to steam, and the pressure becomes tremendous.

Then the guns are unsealed, and the steam explodes. Instantly every starch granule is blasted into a myriad particles.

The kernels of grain are expanded eight times. Yet the coats are unbroken, the shapes are unaltered. We have simply the magnified grain.

One package will tell you why people delight in them. Order it now.

An Early Georgia Monster.

In the fore part of August, 1812, a party of hunters found in a mountainous region now known as Rabun county, Ga., a being nearly eight feet high covered with bluish hair and having a human face adorned with immense ears resembling those of an ass. The creature was stone deaf and on that account seemed wholly unconscious of the approach of the men. This monster seems, from all accounts, to have been seen upon several occasions during the next four years. In 1816 a number of adventurers from Virginia, most of them surveyors working up the unexplored portions of Georgia and the Carolinas, formed themselves into a party for the express purpose of capturing the uncanny being if possible. They scoured the hills and valleys for several days and at last returned unsuccessful to the starting point.

The many tales told of this extraordinary being seem to have created quite a stir all along the Atlantic coast. A printed circular issued by a land company in 1815 says, "The climate of Georgia is exceedingly mild, the soil productive, and the danger of attack from uncouth beasts which are represented as being half beast and half man are fairy tales not worthy of consideration."—Exchange.

Made It Quite Clear.

The engineers of a party in the field were continually annoyed by the curiosity of the farmer folk in the country round. Each and every day their progress was blocked by some inquiring soul who would have liked to spend the forenoon acquiring answers to questions of why and whither and how far and what for, relates the New York Sun. At last a serious faced young man took an interested bucolic graybeard one side and explained matters.

"Now," said he, "I'm telling this to you, and I don't want it to go any further. We have discovered that the earth is a parabolic hexoid, and the ordinates and co-ordinates do not quite tally by a foot or perhaps by fourteen inches. The place where the gap comes has been located in that field just ahead of us. We don't want it mentioned, but we are getting ready to blow up the spot and make an incision before beginning the operation of joining the two."

The engineers finished their labors in peace and solitude.

The Shilling Bequest.

The wealthy auctioneer who reduced the inheritance of a daughter to an annuity of £104 because she had become a Socialist reminds one of the old fashioned "cutting off with a shilling." Why a shilling rather than nothing? Blackstone explains. The Romans used to set aside wills as deficient in natural duty if they disinherited or totally passed by any child of the testator. But the smallest legacy was accepted as evidence that the testator had not lost his reason or his memory, as the law otherwise assumed he had; hence the groundless belief in England that a father could not disinherit his child without a shilling, although the English law knows no presumption of insanity or forgetfulness in such a case. Of Sheridan and his son Tom (and of other fathers and sons) the story is told: "Father—I'll cut you off with a shilling. Son—I'd rather have it now, dad."—St. James' Gazette.

Appealed to His Pride.

It was the most obstinate mule in the lot and refused to enter the car of a train held up at a little wayside station. Threats, cajolery and blows were alike useless. The mule refused to budge, and the slant of his ears told those of the passengers who were familiar with mule ear talk that where he was he intended to stay. Then the aged African who was trying to load him in said in honeyed tones:

"Whuffo' yo' behave dis way befo' all dese strange people? Why, yo' fool mule, doan' yo' know dat dese people will jes' believe dat yo' neber done trabeled befo' in all yo' life?"

The long ears lost their aggressive slant, and the beast went sedately up the inclined plank with the air of a man entering a drawing room car for the first time and determined not to betray the fact.—Exchange.

Household Hintlets.

Do not throw away old umbrellas. By removing the cloth cover and cutting it up in strips you can make a number of dainty neckties for your husband. Judges on Circuit.

It was the genius and foresight of Henry I. that saw the necessity of creating a close connection between the central king's court and the local courts up and down the land. It was Norman and wandering, going where the king went. They were Saxon and stationary; hence to link them together in 1124 a special deputation of judges was for the first time sent on circuit in the country, of whom it is recorded that they "hanged so many thieves as never was before, being in that little while altogether forty-four men."

This vigorous administration of justice by royal authority gained for Henry the title of "the lion of justice" and paved the way for the permanent institution in his grandson's reign. These traveling judges were called justices-in-eyre—i. e., in itinere, on journey. Their head, the justiciar, is still seen in our title the lord chief justice.

Henry II. in 1173 fixed these circuits at six—the home, midland, eastern, western, northeastern and northern, which correspond roughly with those that still exist.—London Standard.

None of That For Them.

They had been married only a month, and it was their first experience in seeking country board. After riding ten long miles in a rattling farm cart they arrived at the door of the farmhouse.

"And now, strangers," said the old farmer after he had asked about a score of questions, "I want to tell yeou right now that down here with us yeou be supposed to go to bed with the chickens." The young man whispered to his young wife, and then both climbed back on the farm cart.

"Boy," said the young man, his lips compressed with determination, "drive us back to the station."

The freckled lad grinned and whipped up the horse.

"You uns didn't seem to like the place?" he chuckled.

"No," said the young man. "We have often read about crowded farmhouses, but when it comes to shoving us off to the henhouse that is going a little too strong. I guess we'll stay in the city."—Chicago News.

What He Could Do.

During the South African war there was a young officer just from Standhurst who was attached to General French's staff. The young fellow has himself achieved some distinction since then and shall be nameless. At that time he was fresh and fidgety and was always imagining a constant menace of attack by the Boers, whom he invariably pronounced "Bores." This pronunciation General French had in vain tried to correct, and it gradually got on his nerves. One day the young officer came to the general to report that he believed he could make out through his fieldglass quite as many as twenty "Bores" hid in the rocks above his camp. "Bores, you say?" inquired the general. "Yes, sir. Bores. Can I do anything, sir? "Yes. Don't add to them."

A Serious Question.

"My dear Mr. Fallows," said the doctor, "I will admit that I am not quite decided as to whether or not yours is a constitutional disease."

Women Suffer Agonie from Diseased Kidneys

And Most Women Do This Not Knowing Real Cause of their Condition

These poor, suffering women have been led to believe that their misery of mind and body is entirely due to "ills of their sex." Usually the kidneys and bladder are responsible—or largely so. And in such cases, the kidneys and bladder are the organs, that need and must have attention.

Those torturing, enervating sick headaches, dragging pains in back, groin and limbs, bloating and swelling of the extremities, extreme nervousness or hysteria, listlessness and constant tired, worn-out feeling—are almost certain symptoms of disordered and diseased kidneys, bladder and liver.

DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills have, in thousands of cases, been demonstrated as remarkably beneficial in all such conditions of female organism—affording the most prompt relief and permanent benefit.

As an illustration of what these Pills will do, Mrs. P. M. Bray of Columbus, Ga., writes that she was very ill with kidney trouble, and that she is now well—and that these Pills are what cured her.

They are very pleasant to take, and can in no case, produce any deleterious effects upon the system—as syrupy, alcoholic, liquid preparations are apt to do.

The Intelligent Mule.

"Some people think mules haven't much intelligence, but I know they have," was the way a commercial traveler interrupted a story teller. "Now, take the town I come from. While I was home on a visit last year the place was all wrought up over the systematic stealing of flowers from the graves in our leading cemetery. The thing had been going on some time, and the people were shocked, of course. Finally a guard was posted and the thief captured, and the thief was a mule.

"It didn't take long to get at all the facts. It seems that a certain woman living near the cemetery had held up the mule's owner, who was beating the animal, prosecuted him for cruelty, then bought the mule and turned it out to pasture. The mule was so grateful to the woman that every night it would jump the pasture fence, go into the cemetery, pick up the freshest bunch of flowers it could find, carry them to the woman's house and deposit them on the front stoop, where she would find them in the morning. Now, when you talk of intelligence in mules"—

Good night," said the man whom the commercial traveler had interrupted.—New York Globe.

The Top Hat.

All hats, "pearkin up like the spire of a steeple a quarter of a yard above the crowne," as a sixteenth century writer describes them, were known in the time of Elizabeth, and the Puritans affected them until they merged into the old fashioned beavers of our great-grandfathers' days. Top hats of leather appeared first in Florence about 1760, and twenty years later silk hats with felt bodies were introduced into England. About 1840 the French silk hat as placed on the market and at once adopted in the familiar "chimney pot" shape. There were several variations of it, such as the Wellington hat, the yeoman crown; the Anglesea with a bell shaped at the top, and the Derby hat, with ribbed silk binding and a big bow. The color also varied. The Earl of Harrington started a fashion for green top hats by wearing one in his garden with the idea of not frightening the birds. He also tested the strength of hats by standing upon them. The silk hat, however, was never so much worn by any great personage as to warrant for its general adoption.—Lonwers.

Championing the Worm.

An incident that occurred some years ago during a session of the British parliament furnished an amusing illustration of the power of satire to bring about results that sober argument often fails to accomplish.

There had been introduced a bill designed to prevent cruelty to wild animals in captivity. It was opposed on the ground that, if passed, it would endanger certain kinds of legitimate sport.

When the Earl of Kimberley arose he gravely admitted the force of this argument.

"There can be no doubt," said he, "that the bill would put an end to fishing with worms as bait. It is a bill to prevent cruelty to wild animals in captivity. The schedule states that the word 'animal' shall be held to include reptile. A worm may be held to be a reptile. A worm impaled on a hook must certainly be held to be in captivity; therefore the angler who uses a live worm for bait would be guilty of cruelty to an animal in captivity."

The laugh that followed at the expense of those against the bill robbed the opposition of whatever force it had and carried the measure to a successful issue.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Sun Cooking.

Sun cooking—roasting and boiling by sunlight instead of by coal or gas—has been going on for 300 years. There are sun stoves that roast a sirloin or boil a soup to perfection. They are only used, however, by scientists. A sun stove consists mainly of a mirror—a spherical mirror—on a joint. There is also a reflector. The place for pot or plate is so situated that the mirror's rays can be focused on it accurately.

A German, Baron Tcherhausen, was the first sun cook. He began in 1687 to boil water, and in 1688 he had very good success in boiling eggs. Sir John Herschel and Buffon are other famous names associated with sun cooking. In California various sun cooks have boiled a gallon of water in twenty minutes, roasted meat in two hours and poached eggs in fifteen minutes, quite as good time as the ordinary fire makes.

An odd thing about meat roasted by sun rays is that it has an unpleasant taste. This is avoided by the insertion of a plate of yellow glass between the meat and mirror. In all solar stoves the sheet of yellow glass figures.—London Tit-Bits.

One Sided Gambling.

"One need only to try his luck at any of the Riviera gambling palaces to learn how slender are the chances to win at roulette," says a German correspondent writing from Ostend. "But if he would experience the gambler's disadvantage at its best let him come to Ostend and join the baccarat players. The game as it is played gives the man who places his money against the bank no chance whatever, and if it were known how much money is sacrificed in a season in the endeavor to win by luck and by system the public would be horrified. It is nothing unusual for the bank to win twenty-four times before an outsider wins once. The people who play, if they have ever played before, know this, and still they come again, respond to the call until they depart and plant their gold in the baccarat mire in the hope that it will bear fruit. It does. But what is the harvest?"

A Shocked Scot.

The London Chronicle says that two Englishmen recently touring in Scotland found that Sabbatarianism occasionally extends to the middle of the week. They were forced by the weather to take refuge in a small country hotel and after lunch adjourned to the billiard room to kill time until the rain stopped. The game had hardly started when the landlord entered in a very drunken condition, upbraided his visitors for their unseemly conduct and insisted on their leaving the billiard room. They received profuse apologies from the landlady. Her husband always got drunk on Sundays, she explained, but, mistaking the day, he had got drunk on Thursday instead, and from force of habit, believing it was Sunday, had been shocked at the click of the billiard balls.

Rebuked the Bishop.

The bishop of Petersburg, England, is a great motorist and is also a stanch teetotaler, and thereby hangs a tale. On one occasion, while out in his car, the chauffeur ran short of petrol and applied at a public house for some more. The publican came out, and, seeing the bishop in his episcopal dress in the car, said: "Yes, I've got plenty of petrol, but I don't sell it to the likes of them what never buys my beer."

Making Herself at Home.

Last summer five-year-old Lola's aunt came to spend a week with them.

"Now, aunty," said Lola, "you must make yourself at home."

"How can I do that, dear?" queried her aunt.

"Why," answered Lola, "you can pitch in and help mamma work."—Chicago News.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following are proposed as amendments to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in accordance with the provisions of the eighteenth article thereof:—

Amendment One—To Article Four, Section Eight.

Section 2. Amend section eight of article four of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, which reads as follows:—

"He shall nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of two-thirds of all the members of the Senate, appoint a Secretary of the Commonwealth and an Attorney General during pleasure, a Superintendent of Public Instruction for four years, and such other officers of the Commonwealth as he is or may be authorized by the Constitution or by law to appoint; he shall have power to fill all vacancies that may happen, in offices to which he may appoint, during the recess of the Senate, by granting commissions which shall expire at the end of their next session; he shall have power to fill any vacancy that may happen, during the recess of the Senate, in the office of Auditor General, State Treasurer, Secretary of Internal Affairs or Superintendent of Public Instruction, in a judicial office, or in any other elective office which he is or may be authorized to fill; if the vacancy shall happen during the session of the Senate, the Governor shall nominate to the Senate, before their final adjournment, a proper person to fill said vacancy; but in any such case of vacancy, in an elective office, a person shall be chosen to said office at the next general election, unless the vacancy shall happen within three calendar months immediately preceding such election, in which case the election for said office shall be held at the second succeeding general election. In acting on executive nominations the Senate shall sit with open doors, and, in confirming or rejecting the nominations of the Governor, the vote shall be taken by yeas and nays, and shall be entered on the journal," so as to read as follows:—

He shall nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of two-thirds of all the members of the Senate, appoint a Secretary of the Commonwealth and an Attorney General during pleasure, a Superintendent of Public Instruction for four years, and such other officers of the Commonwealth as he is or may be authorized by the Constitution or by law to appoint; he shall have power to fill all vacancies that may happen, in offices to which he may appoint, during the recess of the Senate, by granting commissions which shall expire at the end of their next session; he shall have power to fill any vacancy that may happen, during the recess of the Senate, in the office of Auditor General, State Treasurer, Secretary of Internal Affairs or Superintendent of Public Instruction, in a judicial office, or in any other elective office which he is or may be authorized to fill; if the vacancy shall happen during the session of the Senate, the Governor shall nominate to the Senate, before their final adjournment, a proper person to fill said vacancy; but in any such case of vacancy, in an elective office, a person shall be chosen to said office on the next election day appropriate to such office. Unless the vacancy shall happen within two calendar months immediately preceding such election day, in which case the election for said office shall be held on the second succeeding election day appropriate to such office. In acting on executive nominations the Senate shall sit with open doors, and, in confirming or rejecting the nominations of the Governor, the vote shall be taken by yeas and nays, and shall be entered on the journal.

Amendment Two—To Article Four, Section Twenty-one.

Section 3. Amend section twenty-one of article four, which reads as follows:—

"The term of the Secretary of Internal Affairs shall be four years; of the Auditor General three years; and of the State Treasurer two years. These officers shall be chosen by the qualified electors of the State at general elections. No person elected to the office of Auditor General or State Treasurer shall be capable of holding the same office for two consecutive terms," so as to read:—

The terms of the Secretary of Internal Affairs, the Auditor General, and the State Treasurer shall each be four years; and they shall be chosen by the qualified electors of the State at general elections; but a State Treasurer, elected in the year one thousand nine hundred and nine, shall serve for three years, and his successors shall be elected at the general election in the year one thousand nine hundred and twelve, and in every fourth year thereafter. No person elected to the office of Auditor General or State Treasurer shall be capable of holding the same office for two consecutive terms.

Amendment Three—To Article Five, Section Eleven.

Section 4. Amend section eleven of article five, which reads as follows:—

"Except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, justices of the peace or aldermen shall be elected in the several wards, districts, boroughs and townships at the time of the election of constables, by the qualified electors thereof, in such manner as shall be directed by law, and shall be commissioned by the Governor for a term of five years. No township, ward, district or borough shall elect more than two justices of the peace or aldermen without the consent of a majority of the qualified electors within such township, ward or borough; no person shall be elected to such office unless he shall have resided within the township, borough, ward or district for one year next preceding his election. In cities containing over fifty thousand inhabitants, not more than one alderman shall be elected in each ward or district," so as to read:—

Except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, justices of the peace or aldermen shall be elected in the several wards, districts, boroughs or townships, by the qualified electors thereof, at the municipal election, in such manner as shall be directed by law, and shall be commissioned by the Governor for a term of six years. No township, ward, district or borough shall elect more than two justices of the peace or aldermen without the consent of a majority of the qualified electors within such township, ward or borough; no person shall be elected to such office unless he shall have resided within the township, borough, ward or district for one year next preceding his election. In cities containing over fifty thousand inhabitants, not more than one alderman shall be elected in each ward or district.

Amendment Four—To Article Five, Section Twelve.

Section 5. Amend section twelve of article five of the Constituton, which reads as follows:—

"In Philadelphia there shall be established, for each thirty thousand inhabitants, one court, not of record, of police and civil causes, with jurisdiction not exceeding one hundred dollars; such courts shall be held by magistrates whose term of office shall be five years and they shall be elected on general ticket by the qualified voters at large; and in the election of the said magistrates no voter shall vote for more than two-thirds of the number of persons to be elected when more than one are to be chosen; they shall be compensated only by fixed salaries, to be paid by said county; and shall exercise such jurisdiction, civil and criminal, except as herein provided, as is now exercised by aldermen, subject to such changes, not involving an increase of civil jurisdiction or conferring political duties, as may be made by law. In Philadelphia the office of alderman is abolished," so as to read as follows:—

In Philadelphia there shall be established, for each thirty thousand inhabitants, one court, not of record, of police and civil causes, with jurisdiction not exceeding one hundred dollars; such courts shall be held by magistrates whose term of office shall be six years, and they shall be elected on general ticket at the municipal election, by the qualified voters at large; and in the election of the said magistrates no voter shall vote for more than two-thirds of the number of persons to be elected when more than one are to be chosen; they shall be compensated only by fixed salaries, to be paid by said county; and shall exercise such jurisdiction, civil and criminal, except as herein provided, as is now exercised by aldermen, subject to such changes, not involving an increase of civil jurisdiction or conferring political duties, as may be made by law. In Philadelphia the office of alderman is abolished.

All elections for judges of the courts for the several judicial districts, and for county, city, ward, borough, and township officers for regular terms of service, shall be held on the municipal election day; namely, the Tuesday next following the first Monday of November in each odd-numbered year, but the General Assembly may by law fix a different day, two-thirds of all the members of each House consenting thereto: Provided, That such election shall always be held in an odd-numbered year.

Amendment Seven—To Article Eight, Section Fourteen.

Section 8. Amend section fourteen of article eight, which reads as follows:—

"District election boards shall consist of a judge and two inspectors, who shall be chosen annually by the citizens. In cities they may claim exemption from jury duty during their terms of service," so as to read:—

District election boards shall consist of a judge and two inspectors, who shall be chosen biennially, by the citizens at the municipal election; but the General Assembly may require said boards to be appointed in such manner as it may by law provide. Laws regulating the appointment of said boards may be enacted to apply to cities only: Provided, That such laws be uniform for cities of the same class. Each elector shall have the right to vote for the judge and one inspector, and each inspector shall appoint one clerk. The first election board for any new district shall be selected, and vacancies in election boards filled, as shall be provided by law. Election officers shall be privileged from arrest upon days of election, and while engaged in making up and transmitting returns, except upon warrant of a court of record, or judge thereof, for an election fraud, for felony, or for wanton breach of the peace. Amendment Ten—To Article Fourteen Section Seven.

Section 11. Amend section seven, article fourteen, which reads as follows:—

"Three county commissioners and three county auditors shall be elected in each county where such officers are chosen in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five and every third year thereafter; and in the election of said officers each qualified elector shall vote for not more than two persons, and the three persons having the highest number of votes shall be elected; any casual vacancy in the office of county commissioner or county auditor shall be filled by the court of common pleas of the county in which such vacancy shall occur, by the appointment of an elector of the proper county who shall have voted for the commissioner or auditor whose place is to be filled.

Schedule for the Amendments.

Section 12. That no inconvenience may arise from the changes in the Constitution of the Commonwealth, and in order to carry the same into complete operation, it is hereby declared that—

In the case of officers elected by the people, all terms of office fixed by act of Assembly at an odd number of years shall each be lengthened one year, but the Legislature may change the length of the term, provided the terms for which such officers are elected shall always be for an even number of years.

The above extension of official terms shall not affect officers elected at the general election of one thousand nine hundred and eight; nor any city, ward, borough, township, or election division officers, whose terms of office, under existing law, end in the year one thousand nine hundred and ten.

In the year one thousand nine hundred and ten the municipal election shall be held on the third Tuesday of February, as heretofore; but all officers chosen at that election to an office the regular term of which is two years, and also all election officers and assessors chosen at that election, shall serve until the first Monday of December in the year one thousand nine hundred and eleven. All officers chosen at that election to offices the term of which is now four years, or is made four years by the operation of these amendments or this schedule, shall serve until the first Monday of December in the year one thousand nine hundred and thirteen. All justices of the peace, magistrates, and aldermen, chosen at that election, shall serve until the first Monday of December in the year one thousand nine hundred and fifteen. After the year nineteen hundred and ten, and until the Legislature shall otherwise provide, all terms of city, ward, borough, township, and election division officers shall begin on the first Monday of December in an odd-numbered year.

All city, ward, borough, and township officers holding office at the date of the approval of these amendments, whose terms of office may end in the year one thousand nine hundred and eleven, shall continue to hold their offices until the first Monday of December of that year.

All judges of the courts for the several judicial districts, and also all county officers, holding office at the date of the approval of these amendments, whose terms of office may end in the year one thousand nine hundred and eleven, shall continue to hold their offices until the first Monday of January, one thousand nine hundred and twelve.

Exaggerated Cruelty.

A well known gentleman took horse exercise daily, accompanied by a magnificent bloodhound, until he conceived an enthusiasm for cycling, when he altered the program by leaving the bloodhound at home and taking as his companion a fine dachshund.

The pair were passing through a village recently when a laboring youth remarked to his "pal:"

"If Oi wor proime minister Oi'd put a stop ter this 'ere bicyclin' business."

"Why?" queried the other.

"Cos it owt ter be stopped, if only for th' sake o' that dog as is a-puffin' along behind theer," rejoined the first speaker. "It ain't sport; it's cruelty to hanimals."

His companion disagreed and said he thought the dog benefited by the exercise.

"Exercise!" retorted the other scornfully. "D'ye call that exercise? You never saw that dog afore 'is master started bikin', did yer?"

"No, I didn't."

"Well," said the youth, "'e wor one o' th' finest bloodhounds you iver clapped heyes on, an' wot's 'e now? 'Is body's dwindled away to nowt, while 'is legs is worn clean darn to th' stumps. Oi repeat, it's cruelty ter hanimals."—London Bystander.

Got His Money's Worth.

A lady palmist was recently prosecuted, and an amusing incident was noted in connection with the case. One of the witnesses called by the police was an individual who did not appear to be overburdened with intelligence. During a smart cross examination defendant's counsel asked him:

"On first going into the room did you pay a shilling fee to the defendant?"

"Yes," was the reply.

"What did she tell you in return for the money?"

"Oh," said the witness, "she towld me lots o' things, some on 'em true, some on 'em half true an' some on 'em less."

"Now," continued the counsel after the laughter had died away, "this is the point I wish to get at: Was there any attempt at imposition? Did you lady impose upon you at all?"

"Oh, dear, no!" was the response. "I knowed it wor all gammon, so there couldn't be no imposition. Besides, it wor a bad shillin' as I guv her, to start with!"—London Tit-Bits.

Marriage In Picardy.

A Picardy custom, founded on a broad basis of common sense as well as the idea of complete partnership, is that which puts a new bride through a kind of examination in the trade of her husband. It may, of course, have become something of a burlesque, and the bride may purposely show less dexterity than she need. Still, the consideration of the wife as a helpmate is very clearly shown in the performance. If the young wife's husband be a farmer, she will be asked to harness a horse and cart and to harrow a small piece of land. If her choice has fallen on an ironworker, she must hammer a piece of iron; if on a miller, she must measure out wheat from a basket at the church door; if on a smith, she is supposed to be able to strike the anvil; if on a sailor, she has to clean and mend some netting, and so on with the other occupations. Evidently the keeping of an idle wife is not understood in Picardy.—T. P.'s London Weekly.

Whale and Elephant Meat.

There is something unpleasant about the thought of eating whale meat, but it is said that the reality is very palatable. Japan has quite a trade in canned and salted whale meat, and there is to be a campaign to educate the European peoples to like it. Some whaling companies have distributed from their headquarters samples of canned whale meat, and those who have eaten it describe it as tenderer than beef and much like it in taste.

Whale steak seems no queerer than Frankfort sausage made out of an elephant, which is what some German people have been eating. An enterprising butcher over there, hearing that an unruly elephant in the Ghent zoological gardens was to be killed, engaged the carcass. He made 3,800 pounds of sausage out of it and sold every pound at good prices.

Friends.

"Dear friends," said the philosopher, "are scarce items in this world. They are too few to be counted."

"What d'ye call a friend?" he was asked.

"A friend," he replied, "is one who would lend you money if you wanted it and to whom you would lend money—if you had it."—New York Times.

Lady Passenger's Log.

It was blowing rather hard, and there was a nasty sea on an hour and a half before the first breakfast bugle. An officer of an ocean liner hurried along the passage between the state rooms, and a timid voice called to him:

"Oh, Mr. Officer, please stop!"

He turned and saw a dear old la with a wrapper thrown around h peeping through her half open door

"Yes, madam," said the officer.

"Mr. Officer, please would this a gale?" asked the old l ously.

"Oh, no, madam! There least danger, I assure you."

"Well, is it half a gale?"

"Not even half a gale, such an excellent sea boat needn't worry a bit," explained the officer.

"Well, what would you call it, please?" said the lady, steadying herself as the vessel rolled.

"Just a fresh nor'west breeze, madam, with a cross sea running. But, really, there's nothing to fear."

"Thank you so much. I just wanted to get it quite right in my diary, you know."—New York Times.

A Chinese Superstition.

Fengshui is the Chinese superstition that determines good site or locality, and if a town on the Yangtze has not a good fengshui trade will not come to it, and it will be ruined. A town named Peishih had its pagoda in the wrong place—not far enough down the river—and the result was that all traffic which should have come to it was swept past, Peishih being left out in the cold. The people pulled down the pagoda and built another one in the supposed right spot, as nothing would convince them that the depression could arise from any other cause than that of a bad fengshui.

The city of Wanshein, on the other hand, has a perfect fengshui, two fine pagodas, and is very prosperous. But the fact that Wanshein is situated in a fertile valley, where wheat, barley and the poppy flourish abundantly, while Peishih is barren and miserable, does not concern the inhabitants so much as the fengshui site. This remarkable idea in the Chinese mind is only one of thousands like it.

Mastication.

"The body is a manufactory," said a doctor recently. "It has to manufacture bone and blood and muscle and brain out of bread and butter, eggs, beef and milk, and a wonderful process it is. Now, the first part of the process takes place in the mouth, and, as in most factories, the first is the most important. If a wrong start is made, everything that follows is put wrong. If the food isn't well masticated and mixed with the saliva, the stomach, the liver and the intestines are thrown out of gear; consequently most of the more advanced doctors are paying a great deal of attention to the condition of their patients' teeth. They know, to garble Shakespeare a bit, that "good digestion waits on mastication, and health on both."—New York Tribune.

How Letters Strike Our Eyes.

Roman letters of various sizes are commonly called into request by oculists in testing vision. Recent experiments show great differences in the ease with which the various letters are recognized by the same person. T is especially difficult of recognition and is apt to be mistaken for Y. By a similar optical illusion the angle of L is rounded off, making the letter resemble a reversed J. V is the easiest of all letters to recognize, and O presents little difficulty. K is more easily recognized than H, which resembles it closely, and both N and Z are easily recognized. A is easily guessed at from its general form, but is difficult of positive recognition, including distinct perception of the horizontal line. E and F are among the most difficult of all letters.

Discouraging.

A pompous man went into a drug store early the other morning to buy a cigar. The only person he found there was the soda water dispenser. The boy was sweeping out the store.

"Sweeping out, eh?" said the man. "Well, that's how I got my start."

The boy looked him over and replied, "Aw, what do you want to discourage me like that for?"

When the man left he was frowning.—Denver Post.

The Monkey and the Pie.

An Indian faker had a monkey that he had brought up from babyhood, says an English writer. The pair were fast friends, the monkey being a faithful attendant on his master and as good as a watchdog. One day the faker made a pie for dinner and left it to cook on a charcoal fire while he went for a walk. As the cooking proceeded the savory smell was too much for the monkey. It raised the crust and tasted the chicken. Finding the food very tasty, it ate more and more until nothing but the crust remained. Then it remembered its master, who would shortly return hungry and ready to enjoy his meal. What was to be done? The sharp eyes of the monkey detected some crows not far away, so without loss of time it lay down on the ground as if dead. By and by a crow came along and pecked at the monkey, which seized the bird in a twinkling, strangled it, stripped off the feathers, placed it in pieces in the dish, covered it over with the crust and then contentedly awaited the return of the faker, to whom the whole incident was related by an eyewitne
